Byrd Warns Of Possible Civil Rights 'Bloodshed'

Virginia Senator Bitterly Attacks Truman's 'Force' Program for South

By the United Press

Senator Harry F. Byrd (D., Va.) asserted yesterday that passage of President Truman's civil rights program might lead to bloodshed in the South.

In one of the bitterest Southern attacks on the program to date, he said in a radio interview over Station WEAM that it was "aimed directly at the South" and constituted a "devastating broadside at the dignity of Southern traditions and institutions."

The President's antidiscrimination plan, he said, "would impose a system of force upon the people of the South similar to that undertaken after the Civil War with such disastrous results in racial hatred and bloodshed."

"The stakes are high and I do not believe the South will remain impotent to protect its rightful interests," he said.

He added that Southern Senators will "fight with every legal and parliamentary device at their disposal" to prevent enactment of Mr. Truman's racial rights measures. But he said the Southerners' "road is a very difficult one" because both the Republican and Democratic national parties now are committed to antidiscrimination programs.

Byrd has been named frequently by "rebel" Southern Democrats as their choice for a presidential candidate to oppose Mr. Truman on the civil rights issue.

The Virginian said the President's program would strike a "terrible blow" at the American form of government and constitute "a mass invasion of States' rights never before even suggested by any previous President of any party affiliation in the Nation's history."

Called Vote Bait

Terming the entire presidential civil rights program "vote bait for the big city minorities," he said Southern Democrats are asking, "what has the South done to justify such treatment by the national political party of their traditional allegiance?"

He said the President's proposal for fair employment practice laws would permit a "Federal gestapo" to invade the States and "dictate whom we shall employ." He hit anti-poll-tax legislation as aimed at depriving the States of "their constitutional right and duty to determine the qualifications of voters in the several States."

He said antilynching laws would "penalize and punish . . . cities, towns and counties . . . and the innocent citizens in them for acts of violence and lawlessness committed within their borders, without their knowledge, connivance or assent."

President Truman is expected to get the latest "battlefront" report on the Southern revolt this week from Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath.

21 Men Periled As Heavy Seas Batter Vessel

Waves Thwart Coast Guard Rescue Effort Off Carolina Coast

Morehead City, N. C., March 7 (AP).—Twenty-one stranded seamen grimly waited tonight for help while heavy seas slowly pounded their battered vessel on a North Carolina sand reef.

Coast Guardsmen steed by helplessly, waiting for the waves to subside so they could remove the men from the water-filled motorship Norfolk.

Crews from the Morehead City and Fort Macon stations hauled one crewman, Carlos Mario Riquelme, out of the 18-foot seas before dark tonight. But the water was so rough the line had to be cut.

Chief Boatswains Mate Paul Woodard, said the 21 men elected to stay with their vessel rather than risk jumping into the seas.

Whether the 250-foot ship would withstand a pounding through the night was questionable, he said.

The Coast Guard cutter Mendota was battling its way from Wilmington, N. C., toward the scene.

Riquelme, suffering from head injuries, said the vessel had taken water. He could not furnish any further details. He is under treatment at a hospital here.

"Radio room flooding! Life boats smashed!" was the message sent earlier today by the captain of the stricken vessel.

Only communication tonight between the two rescue lifeboats standing by and the Norfolk was by flares. Radio contact was impossible because of the differences in frequency between the Norfolk radio and that of the Coast Guard vessels.

Truce Arranged In Costa Rica's Political Row

San Jose, Costa Rica, March 7 (AP).—A brief truce was agreed upon today in Costa Rica's political dispute as a bank official warned the nation's economy was endangered.

The truce, extending to midnight Monday, was entered into by government and opposition party leaders. Efforts will be made to designate a president to take office May 8.

Otilio Ulate Blanco was declared elected President February 8 but Congress annulled his victory after Dr. Rafael Calderon Guardia charged election fraud. Calderon was the government party candidate.

The Costa Rican Bankers Association, working with Archbishop Victor Manuel Sanabria, insisted on the truce.

4 Reservists Killed In Navy Plane Crash

Olathe, Kans., March 7 (AP).—Four men were killed and two injured today in the crash of a Navy plane taking off from the Olathe Naval Air Station.

The victims were reserve officers or enlisted men of the organized reserve.

Girl, 17, Charged With Murder in Killing of Parents

Eminence, Mo., March 7 (AP).—A 17-year-old girl was charged with murder today after signing a statement that she killed her father and mother last week. The bodies were discovered last night.

Police said Betty Jane Kroeger told of shooting her mother after an argument last Tuesday night—then going to her father's store the next morning and shooting him while he was asleep. He had stayed at the store overnight because of a series of robberies.

Dead were Fred Kroeger, 50, and his wife, Minnie, 48.

The girl told police she shot her father because he would find out about the first shooting. The girl would not say what the argument was about.

CIO Asks Pay Rise to Offset Loss

Study Is Declared To Show Mounting Prices Have Cut Wages 15 Per Cent

By The Associated Press

The CIO called yesterday for "substantial wage increases" and offered figures to prove they are justified.

A study the CIO made public pictures a loss of 15 per cent to wage earners in the race between prices and take-home pay since January, 1945. What is called "real wages" fell that far behind, allowing for tax deductions, the CIO economists said in a report to CIO President Philip Murray.

Murray, who also heads the steelworkers, with 800,000 members, will be negotiating for a "substantial" wage increase from United States Steel Corp. and other companies, beginning April 30. Murray also wants a pension plan.

Packinghouse Strike

The packinghouse workers are poised to strike March 16 for a 29-cent hourly pay increase. That figure was chosen on the basis of a Bureau of Labor statistics study, which the union says showed a three-member family needed 29 cents an hour more than the packinghouse average.

The United Auto Workers open negotiations with General Motors next month for a 30-cent hourly increase and already are bargaining with the Chrysler Motor Co. for a 35-cent hourly boost. The United Electrical Workers are negotiating with General Electric and Westinghouse, and have "confined their demand to a "cost of living" raise of about $13.25 a week.

Living Costs Cited

The CIO study said that in the 18 months since OPA was abandoned, retail food prices have risen 42 per cent, clothing is up 22 per cent and rent has increased 6.4 per cent.

The CIO economists said corporation profits of 1947 were high enough to allow wage increases without any price hike. Taken altogether, these profits would allow a 10 per cent wage increase and still leave corporations with their 1946 profit level, the CIO said.

An 18 per cent boost would be possible while maintaining 1945 profits, and a 20 per cent raise would maintain 1926 profit levels without increasing prices, it was contended.

Capital Escapes Snow; Today Mild, Fair to Cloudy

If the temperature had been a few degrees lower early yesterday Washington would have been blanketed under an 8-inch snowfall.

A warm front kept the precipitation in the sleet and rain stage. If the precipitation of .85 of an inch had fallen as snow, the weatherman estimated, it would have been about eight inches deep.

Today will be mostly fair, followed by considerable cloudiness, and becoming colder tonight. The temperature is expected to reach a high in the upper 40s this afternoon.

Gunman Kidnaps Family of 3 Who Find Him Looting

Lexington, Mass., March 7 (U.P.).—Three members of one family were kidnaped by a gunman tonight when they surprised him ransacking their home.

Mr. and Mrs. Lincoln Martin and their son, George, had entered their house after parking their auto.

He brandished a gun and forced the Martins back to their automobile and compelled them to drive 7 miles to Belmont.

There, he ordered Martin to stop, gave Mrs. Martin 50 cents and told her and the boy to get out. He forced Martin to drive on. Mrs. Martin reported to police and a State-wide alarm was broadcast.

Accused Bureau Head Broadcasts As Anti-Red Unit Calls Witnesses

By the United Press

Dr. E. U. Condon yesterday assured the public he has "never discussed any secret or classified matter, relating to atomic energy or anything else, with any foreigner or unauthorized person."

The director of the National Bureau of Standards defended his safekeeping of top military secrets as a House Un-American Activities Subcommittee called a number of "surprise" witnesses to testify at closed hearings tomorrow on charges that Condon consorted with Communists and alleged Soviet spies.

Expects Big Developments

A spokesman for the House Committee said that "awfully important developments are in the offing" in the Condon case. He declined to elaborate or to name the witnesses.

Condon replied in a radio broadcast over Station WINX yesterday that he has a number of acquaintances among the "Polish, British, French, Mexican and other" diplomats in Washington because "people in my position necessarily enter into the official life of the Capital.

But, he added: "I can assure the American people that I have never discussed any secret or classified matter, relating to atomic energy or anything else, with any foreigner or unauthorized person."

Checked and Cleared, He says

Condon noted that one of the points raised against him by the committee was that the Atomic Energy Commission has not yet given him a full clearance for secret work. The scientist, who worked on the wartime atomic bomb project, replied that he was "checked and cleared by Maj. Gen. (Leslie R.) Groves," who headed the army's Manhattan project.

As for the civilian commission, which succeeded the Army in control of atomic security, Condon said it "continues to send across my desk a steady stream of secret documents referring to work we do for them at the bureau."

Chairman Bourke B. Hickenlooper (R., Iowa) of the Joint Congressional Atomic Committee, said the commission has reported that Condon does not handle "top-secret" work.

Wallace Defends Condon In Address at York

York, Pa., March 7 (AP).—Henry A. Wallace jumped to the defense of Dr. Edward U. Condon today.

He said in a prepared address the House Committee on Un-American Activities is seeking "to intimidate all scientists" in questioning the loyalty of the director of the National Bureau of Standards.

Committee of 1000 Asks Fund Denial

New York, March 7 (U.P.).—The "Committee of 1000" called on Congress today to reject the proposed $200,000 appropriation for the House Un-American Activities Committee, following "its irresponsible attack on Dr. Edward U. Condon."

Labor Leaders Of 13 Nations To Discuss Aid

London ERP Parley Tomorrow May See Split in Federation

London, March 7 (AP).—Labor leaders from 13 countries will open a Marshall Plan conference Tuesday that may result in some union organizations' breaking away from the Communist-dominated World Federation of Trade Unions.

Maurice Bouladoux, assistant general secretary of the French Federation of Christian Workers, today said steps probably would be taken to form a new international organization free of Communist control.

Russia opposes the London meeting. Communist-influenced labor organizations in France and Italy declined to send delegates. The announced purpose of the meeting is to discuss methods of helping carry out the European Recovery Plan.

James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the American Congress of Industrial Organizations, said the CIO wanted the European Recovery Program to succeed and "would also like to bring about the kind of agreement that would make possible the continuation and growth of the WFTU."

But, he said, he doubts if "anything can be done in the WFTU unless the Soviet government changes its attitude."

In Moscow recently Carey obtained from Soviet labor leaders an agreement to join in discussion of the Marshall Plan with the WFTU executive bureau "at any date in the future."

Representatives of the American Federation of Labor, which is not affiliated with the WFTU, are scheduled to attend the Tuesday session. It was called by the British Trades Union Congress and the National Trade Union centers of the Benelux countries. Their invitations went out after the WFTU, supposedly because of the Russian opposition, refused to call a February session on Marshall Plan aid.

Europe Pact To Be Ready Wednesday

Brussels Reports 50-Year Treaty of 5 ...tions Is Now Mainly Economic

Brussels, March 7 (U.P.).—Western Europe's answer to the Russian satellite bloc in eastern Europe—a binding 50-year treaty embracing Britain, France, Belgium, Holland and Luxembourg—will be ready for signature by Wednesday night, British diplomatic sources said today.

The main features of the pact, as drafted at present, will be economic and will call for sweeping trade agreements covering all five nations.

Political and military clauses, informants said, will be left flexible purposely so they can be fitted into the treaty after detailed negotiation.

The first negotiations on standardization of military equipment and training may start later this month when Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, chief of the British Imperial General Staff, visits here.

There was speculation over newspaper reports Italy might be included as a sixth nation in they treaty but no official comment was available. This question may be put over until after the Italian parliamentary election April 17.

Red Press Denounces 'Trizonia' Decisions

Moscow, March 7 (NYHT).—The Soviet press attacked today the Big Three western powers by denouncing the decisions achieved at the London Conference which recessed yesterday.

The official news agency Tass termed an "outrageous violation" of the Potsdam agreement the London negotiations involving the United States, Britain and France, as well as the Benelux countries (Belgium, The Netherlands and Luxemburg).

The result of the London Conference, according to the Soviet statement, is to turn Zisonia into Trizonia (the Anglo-American zones plus the French zone), and this, it added, is a "crude violation of obligations under the Potsdam agreement and other decisions by the four powers regarding Germany."

Turkey Favors Shifting Aid to Sagging Economy

Istanbul, March 7 (AP).—Turkish sources said tonight the government would like to change the military character of the American aid program so it would concentrate instead on Turkey's sagging economic survey. It was presumed the Turks hoped such a mission would propose that any Russian threat be not wholly military as was the initial grant of 100 million dollars.

Ankara sources said the military aid program was drawn in haste.

Hungarian Party Asked to Expel 37 Right-Wingers

Budapest, Hungary, March 7 (U.P.).—George Marosan, deputy secretary-general of the leftist-controlled Hungarian Social Democratic Party, asked the party congress today to expel 37 leading right-wing members.

The list of persons Marosan wants expelled is headed by Parliamentary Deputies Anna Kethly, Ferenc Szeder and former Minister of Industry Antal Ban.

He replied to western Socialist criticism of the left-wing dominated congrers by saying:

"There is no cheating. This congress is perfectly legal. All the present delegates were elected in December or early January and there has been no change since."

De Gaulle Asks U. S. to Pledge Military Help

GEN. CHARLES De GAULLE
Includes Western Germany

Frenchman Includes West Germany In Proposed Pact To Halt Russians

By Walter Kerr

Compiegne, France, March 7 (NYHT).—Gen. Charles de Gaulle today asked the United States to guarantee the military security of western Europe just as the Marshall Plan is intended to support economic reconstruction.

Genera91 De Gaulle said at a political rally here that he saluted American initiative which had led to the European Recovery Program for economic reconstruction.

"But it is clear," he said, "that this support will have to be extended at the same time to embrace military measures and in a manner as precise and explicit as the Marshall Plan is concerning credits and imports. It goes without saying that the first condition for this would be a true national defense of our own."

Western Germany Included

[Sources close to De Gaulle said he did not want American troops, the United Press said.

[The sources said De Gaulle had in mind a close economic, political and military alliance of free European states and their overseas territories backed by American arms, ammunition and equipment. The general, in his speech here, did not specify the kind or amount of military aid.]

He spoke of all Europe outside of Russia or Communist domination, including the American, British and French zones of occupation in Germany. It was the first time he included Germany in the "free states of Europe."

Thousands heard him speak on this sunny day, but the square was not full.

De Gaulle said that Soviet Russia was out for world domination—"its 180 million people run by an absolute dictator"—aided by Communist satellites. He listed the Baltic states, Poland, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Albania, Romania, Hungary—"and, now, Czechoslovakia." Furthermore, he said, Finland, Austria, Greece, Turkey and Iran were threatened. Italy is in a state of alarm.

France Would Take Lead

Consequently, he went on, the remaining free states of Europe must form an economic, diplomatic and "strategic" group. It would consist of 250 million people. Within it would be the western zones of occupation, "called to join the west as Christianity and Charlemagne called them in former times." France would take the lead.

[Germany must come in western Europe's organization, the Associated Press quoted him. But not if she still seeks to become a possible menace. He viewed the reconstitution of the Reich as a "bad solution" of the German problem, but said the German states, "fed-

Aid Fund Cut Vote Expected To Fall Short

Critics in Senate Seen Mustering Not More Than 34

By The Associated Press

Not more than 34 Senators will vote to cut the Marshall Plan's $5,300,000,000, backers predicted yesterday.

Such a number probably would be several short of forcing a slash.

Senator George (D., Ga.) told a reporter he thinks not more than 34 votes can be mustered to cut. Senator Smith (R., N. J.) said he doubts there will be that many.

Critics seem likely to settle on four billion dollars as the amount they want to allow the first year.

1. The Senate starts its second week of debate today on European recovery. This bill authorizes Congress to appropriate up to $5,300,000,000 for 12 months of a four-year program. Sixteen countries outside of Communist Europe would benefit.

2. The House is letting the Senate act first. The House Foreign Affairs Committee is holding hearings. This group wants to wrap up all foreign aid in one package. The Administration asks help also in varying forms for Greece, Turkey, China and Trieste.

House Speaker Martin forecast that the House will insist that America supply military aid to China.

Seems to Make Sense

"The generals say they need it," he told reporters. "And it certainly seems to have some sense to it, too."

So far the Administration has recommended no military help for China. President Truman and Secretary of State Marshall have asked for 570 million dollars to enable the Chinese to build up industries and buy necessary things abroad.

But Lieut. Gen. Albert C. Wedemeyer, director of plans and operations for the Army, told the House Committee last week that in China and elsewhere, economic aid must be backed up with military aid to stop communism. "Unless the right steps are taken in this direction," Wedemeyer said, "we are going to pay in blood."

William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to Russia and France, has proposed 100 million dollars in military help for the Chinese.

Martin Declines to Guess

Martin wouldn't guess the amount of such aid the House might vote. He said he hadn't heard reports that the committee might go for an even one billion dollars for China for both military and economic help.

The committee has more hear-

Argentina Quiet As People Vote In Test on Peron

Buenos Aires, March 7 (AP).—Argentine voters today chose 83 deputies for the lower chamber of Parliament in an election testing the popularity of President Juan D. Peron.

The national electoral board said the voting was without incident. The polls closed at 6 p. m., but the ballot count may not start until Wednesday and final returns will not be known until next week.

President Peron, who underwent an emergency operation for appendicitis a week ago, left the hospital to vote.

Peron's supporters sought to maintain the present heavy majority in the lower house. Of 158 seats, they have 109. The voters filled 79 seats—half the membership of the lower house—plus 4 other vacancies caused by deaths.

21 Ga. Convicts Flee Work Camp

Atlanta, Ga., March 7 (U.P.).—Twenty-one convicts in the Dekalb County work camp escaped today, police reported.

Four were recaptured within 2½ hours.

Police said the convicts fled through the camp kitchen and over a fence. None was believed armed.

Protestant Group Will Fight State Aid for Catholic Schools

By Lee Grove
Post Reporter

Declaring the Catholic Church had entered politics in seeking public funds for its schools, a Protestant group said yesterday it would fight the attempt in Congress and the courts.

The statement came from Protestants and other Americans United for Separation of Church and State in an open letter to the National Catholic Welfare Conference. It repeated the charge made in its manifesto of January 12 that the Catholic hierarchy in the United States seeks a union of church and state "at least at the public treasury."

A reply to the manifesto was issued by the Most Rev. John T. McNicholas, Archbishop of Cincinnati and chairman of the National Catholic Welfare Conference administrative board, January 26, in which he denied that the Catholic Church was seeking church-state union.

Yesterday's letter was issued from POAU headquarters, 924 Colorado Building, and signed by Edwin McNeill Poteat, president of POAU and of Colgate-Rochester Divinity School; Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam of the Methodist Church, New York area; Charles Clayton Morrison, former editor of the Christian Century; John A. Mackay, president, Princeton Theological Seminary; Louie D. Newton, president, Southern Baptist Convention, and other officers.

They dismissed Archbishop McNicholas's reply as "disingenuous"

The Washington Post Poll

15-Year-Olds Should Be In By 9 to 10:30, Adults Feel

How late should girls and boys of 15 be allowed to stay out on school nights and weekend nights?

The average Washington adult believes that a girl of 15 should be home no later than about 8:45 on school nights, and gives boys of the same age a deadline of about 9 o'clock, The Washington Post Poll has found.

On Friday and Saturday nights, the average Washington adult thinks that both boys and girls should be home by about 10:30.

These deadlines are averages for all Washingtonians interviewed. Many people feel that boys and girls of this age should be home much earlier and a few say that they should not be permitted to go out in the evening at all.

On the other hand, 16 per cent would allow girls of 15 to be out until 11:30 or later on Friday and Saturday nights, and 17 per cent would extend this privilege to boys of the same age.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on interviews with a representative cross-section of adults living in the District and nearby Maryland and Virginia.

Pollers asked:

At what time do you think a boy of 15 should be home on school nights?

How about a girl of 15—at what time should she be home on school nights?

	Per cent for BOYS to be in	Per cent for GIRLS to be in
Shouldn't go out on school nights	5%	7%

Median answer	9 p. m.	8:48

On this question, there is little difference between the answers given by people with children, and those without. Mom is likely to have the same ideas o nthe proper time to come home, as Pop.

Local residents were also asked:

At what time do you think he (a boy of 15) should be home on Friday and Saturday nights?

At what time should she (a girl of 15) be home on Friday and Saturday nights?

Answers were divided as follows:

	giving time for BOYS to be in	giving time for GIRLS to be in
Shouldn't go out at all	—	1%
7:30 or earlier	1%	2
7:31 to 8:30 p. m.	2	2

Protest Meeting Broken Up

Finnish Decision to Negotiate Russian Pact Expected Today

Helsinki, Finland, March 7 (AP). President Juho Paasikivi will decide tomorrow whether to accept Prime Minister Stalin's request for discussion of a Russian-Finnish mutual assistance treaty, informed sources said tonight.

Opinion in the Finnish capital is that Paasikivi will decide to honor Stalin's request, and appoint a delegation to negotiate with the Russian.

Earlier today, strong-arm men broke up a mass meeting of Finns who were protesting against the proposed Russian-Finnish treaty. Authorities said the disrupters were Communists.

Today's mass meeting was called by Ernesti Hentunen, an attorney who leads an independent party which carries little weight in Finnish politics.

Thousands of Finns strolling in the sunshine had stopped to hear Hentunen say Finland cannot have a Russian pact without the approval of the other peace treaty signatories.

"If we must defend the Soviet Union, it is not right," he said.

At that point, a group of four or five men grabbed the microphone, pushed Hentunen aside, and announced that the meeting was organized by Fascists.

Others rushed forward, and police hustled Hentunen away.

In the windows of the Hotel Karelia, which the Soviets have taken over, Russians were observed snapping pictures and following the incident.

Elsewhere today Communists were combating the belief of some Finns that their sons could be sent abroad to fight if Finland should sign a military pact

PEOPLE In The NEWS

Bishop G. B. Oxnam

G. (for Garfield) Bromley Oxnam, Methodist bishop of the New York area, one of the signers of yesterday's open letter objecting to public funds being used for parochial schools, has long been known for outspokenness.

Oxnam

In 1945, after visiting the armed forces in the European and the Mediterranean theaters, he said the Roman Catholic Church was intolerant to Protestants in areas where it was dominant. In 1947 he declared that "Roman Catholic insistence on continence as the only virtuous method of spacing children is sinful."

On many occasions he has attacked what he called the Roman Catholic attempt to be both a church and a state.

In 1944 he was considered a possible successor to the then vacant Washington bishopric, but was assigned that year to the New York bishopric.

When a meeting to organize Protestants and Other Americans United for Separation of Church and State was held here in October, 1947, Bishop Oxnam presided, and became a vice president of it.

The bishop, 61, was born in Sonora, Calif., studied at home and abroad before and after ordainment in 1916, and has been a bishop since 1936.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, now in his twenty-first year as president of George Washington University, is a man of many parts.

Marvin

His well-developed hobby of farming (which he makes profitable as well), his interest in books which has run him to a 20,000 volume library, are only sidelights in a career which included his ascent to a university presidency at the age of 33 (University of Arizona).

A captain in World War I, Dr. Marvin was an instructor in economics and allied subjects prior to and immediately after the war. He followed this facet of his career when he was chosen as a lecturer at the International Institute in Geneva ni 1930.

Since he became president of George Washington University in 1927, the school has become fully accredited by the Association of American Universities and the American Association of University Women, and assets of the institution have been increased from $2,575,756 to $8,600,000.

Disclaiming erudition, Dr. Marvin has been known to comment that a college president "is supposed to know something about everything and everythnig about nothing."

Dr. Marvin lives at 2540 Massachusetts ave. nw. with his wife the former Dorothy Ellen Betts. They have one child.

Harold L. Ickes

Acid-tongued Harold LeClair Ickes, who made a stormy exit from President Truman's Cabinet in 1946, once said that "if a man worked hard at it he couldn't get a bigger list of enemies than I."

Ickes

Ickes, who is to testify today before a joint judiciary subcommittee on the tidelands bill, is an acknowledged master of invective, which explains the enemies.

He once said that the late Huey Long had "halitosis of the intellect" and that the late Hugh Johnson, NRA administrator in the early 1930s, suffered from "mental saddlesores."

When the late Wendell L. Willkie was put up as the Republican presidential candidate in 1940 Ickes referred to him as "the simple, barefoot Wall Street lawyer."

When Thomas E. Dewey ran four years later, Ickes observed that the New York Governor had "thrown his diaper in the ring."

Ickes, now 74, as been a Republican, a Bull Moose and a Democrat in his political lifetime. One of the original New Dealers, he ended a 13-year tenure as Secretary of the Interior in February, 1946, when he resigned after splitting with President Truman over the latter's nomination of Edwin W. Pauley, oil man, to be Undersecretary of the Navy.

Ickes, his 35-year-old wife and their two children live on a farm at Olney, Md. The former Cabinet member now writes a newspaper column.

Van Fleet Escapes Dynamite Attempt

Greek Guerillas Fail in Attempt To Blast Train of U. S. General

Kilkis, Greece, March 7 (AP)—One hundred pounds of dynamite were removed from rail tracks three hours before a train carrying Maj. Gen. James A. Van Fleet, new head of the United States Military Mission, and the Greek Chief-of-Staff, Lieut. Gen. Dmitrios Yadzis, passed the point this morning.

Greek officers said four sacks containing the explosive, found early this morning, had been placed there by guerillas during the night.

They said a detonator had been placed a short distance from the charge so the engine and several cars could pass over the charge before it was exploded.

Armored cars are patrolling the point, which is about 10 miles south of Kilkis.

The party, which included the Third Army Corps commander, General Gregoropoulos and American officers attached to Van Fleet, came from Salonika to inspect the Thirty-seventh Brigade installations.

[Dispatches from Salonika to the United Press said 100 guerillas had been killed and some 250 captured in continuing actions in the snow-covered Mount Olympus-Mount Pierria sectors.

Bulgarian Envoy to Britain Assails Reds and Resigns

(From Press Dispatches)

London, March 7. — Nikola Dolaptchiev, Bulgarian Minister to London, resigned today in protest against "the establishment of a Soviet system in eastern Europe."

He said he would work as a private citizen for restoration of liberty and democracy in his country.

Two days ago Vassel Yurukov resigned as Bulgarian Minister to Belgium on the ground that Communists had suppressed all liberty in his country and that the leftist regime installed itself by violence.

Dolaptchiev, an outstanding lawyer, was appointed Minister to London last summer. It was reported he got the post so that he could not defend Nikola Petkov, the opposition Agrarian leader executed last year.

Dolaptchiev said that when he accepted his appointment the Bulgarian government assured him it "would pursue a policy of good and friendly relations with Britain and the Western Powers." He added:

"Events after my departure proved the contrary. And what has recently occurred in eastern and central Europe, in Czechoslovakia and Finland, makes my task in London impossible."

In Bulgaria itself, he said, "the liquidation of all independent political activities and the actual establishment of a one-party system of government . . . will lead inevitably to the suppression of all liberties."

Food Exports In '47 Topped Only by 1919

By The Associated Press

The value of food shipped abroad last year was the second highest in United States history.

The Commerce Department, reporting this yesterday, said:

Food exports totaled $2,366,448,000, second only to 1919's $2,641,000,000. Last year's shipments were $200,062,000 higher than those of 1946.

Imports of food also were the second highest in history. They totaled $1,671,509,000, 27 per cent more than the previous year although well below the $1,816,000,000 record of 1920.

Major increases in export values in 1947 over 1946 showed up in horse meat, condensed milk, canned fruits, peanuts, roasted coffee and chewing gum, among others. Wheat, butter and cheese exports also were higher.

Major decreases in items exported included uncanned beef, veal and pork, canned meats, oleomargarine, evaporated milk and cream, eggs, tomato and grapefruit juice, and chocolate candy.

Imports showing substantial increases included canned beef, shrimp, bananas, grapes, cocoa, cane sugar, maple sugar, "and sirup, honey and whisky," all listed as foodstuffs.

20 Hurt in Bus Crash

Chariton, Iowa, March 7 (AP).—Twenty persons were injured, three seriously early this morning when a westbound Burlington bush crashed into an abutment of a Rock Island railroad underpass here. The passengers were pinned in the bus for two hours, and finally were cut out with hacksaws.

St. Patrick's Day Dinner To Honor Archbishop

The Most Rev. Patrick A. O'Boyle, Catholic Archbishop of Washington, will be the guest of honor at a St. Patrick's Day banquet in the Mayflower Hotel at 7:30 p. m. March 17, sponsored by the Commodore John Barry Division and the Ladies Auxiliary, Ancient Order of Hibernians.

Principal speaker will be Represenative Michael J. Kirwan (D., Ohio).

Diet for Diabetics

The lay society of the Diabetes Association of D. C. will present a program on diet for diabetics Wednesday at 8 p. m. at the Federal Security Building.

Prague Bars Movies of 5 U. S. Stars

Prague, March 7 (AP).—Censorship clamped down on the films of five United States stars today because of anti-Communist testimony last October before the House Committee on Un-American Activities. The government banned Adolph Menjou, Gary Cooper, Robert Montgomery, Robert Taylor and Ginger Rogers from appearing on screens here.

Similar action was taken January 16 in Hungary.

A half dozen films, ranging from "Sergeant York" to "Tales of Manhattan," also were barred. Other American and British films continued showing.

A Russian film, "Salute to Moscow," is playing two first rank theaters.

The first step was taken today toward merging Czechoslovakia's Communist and Social Democratic parties into a workers unity party. Similar mergers elsewhere in eastern Europe have marked the disappearance of Social Democrats.

Originated in Bohemia

The merger move originated at Liberec, a small city in north Bohemia near the German border. The action committee of the Social Democratic Party there called on the party's central committee in Prague to allow the Liberec group to join forces with the Communists.

Jan Fierlinger, brother of the Social Democratic Boss Zdenek Fierlinger, said the question of fusing the two parties would be decided within the next five months by a Social Democratic Congress.

"It may be too soon to say that we shall merge with the Communists, but a common party of workers and working intelligentsia certainly would be desirable," he said. "However, things here are not of the same pattern as in Hungary and Romania, and perhaps we will not merge."

Party Changes Name

Communist Chief Rudolf Slansky denied his party wanted to raid the Social Democratic ranks in the Communist drive for 2,000,000 mem. He reproved zealous Communists for trying to make Social Democratics change their affiliations.

Meanwhile, purgers in Slovakia announced the Slovak Democratic Party had been changed into the Party of People's Unity.

For the first time in years, President and Mrs. Eduard Benes were not listed among those making a birthday pilgrimage to the tomb of Thomas C. Masaryk, the first president of Czecholslovakia, at Lany.

Benes still was convalescing at Sezimovo Uti.

Douglas Back From Parley On Germany

(From Press Dispatches)

Back from London where he took part in the successful three-power conference on Western Germany, Lewis W. Douglas commented yestehrday on the spirit in which the conferees "adjusted their views."

"Throughout the discussion," Douglas said at New York where he arrived by plane en route here, "there was a clear desire by the participants . . . to arrive at mutually satisfactory agreements."

Douglas, United States Ambassador to London, said he will confer with State Department officials and "probably" President Truman on details of the European Recovery Program.

The London conference agreed on international control of the Ruhr, integration of western Germany in the Marshall Plan and eventually a German federated government of the three western zones.

Creech-Jones Back in Britain On Eve of Holy Land Parleys

Lake Success, Long Island, March 7 (NYHT.).—Arthur Creech-Jones, British Colonial Secretary and Britain's representative here during United Nations Security Council debate on Palestine, has returned suddenly to London, it was learned tonight on the eve of big-power consultations on a Holy Land solution.

Some United Nations diplomats wondered if the trip could have something to do with a reported new effort at conciliation between Arabs and Jews.

Britain will give up the Palestine mandate on May 15, but there have been rumors of efforts to have her stay on which might be acceptable to all concerned if the Arabs and Jews could come to some understanding on a peaceful settlement.

It appeared certain the United States will seek tomorrow to get big-power agreement on a new effort to persuade Arabs and Jews to get together. Consultations between American representatives and the delegates of France, China and Russia will start at 11 a. m.

Dean Russek, head of the State Department's U. N. division, was in Washington over the weekend, reportedly inconsultation with Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett.

Palestine Commission Members Get $60 Daily

Lake Success, March 7 (AP).—United Nations officials disclosed today that members of the Palestine Commission receive $60 a day each. This amounts to $21,000 a year, approximately the amount paid assistant secretaries-general of the U. N.

The Palestine Commission members are Karel Lisicky of Czechoslovakia, Senator Vicente J. Francisco of the Philippines, Dr. Eduardo Morgan of Panama, Per Federspiel of Denmark and Raul Diez de Medina of Bolivia.

They have not decided where they will go to the Holy Land.

Members of the U. N. commissions in Korea and Greece get $20 a day from the United Nations but still draw salaries from their own governments. Members of the Palestine Commission are paid only by the U. N.

Arabs Poised to Start Battle At His Word, Says Fawzi Bey

In Northern Palestine, March 7 (AP).—The veteran Arab warrior Fawzi Bey al Kaukji inspected his armed forces today and declared:

"Everything is ready. The battle starts when I give the word."

He said he entered Palestine two days ago over the Allenby Bridge. He assumed active command today.

"I have come to Palestine to stay and fight until Palestine is a free united Arab country, or until I am killed and buried here."

He declined to discuss the actual fighting strength of his "army of liberation."

A member of his staff said mobile armored equipment includes six weapons carriers, 20 armored scout cars and more than 100 assorted light artillery pieces. "There's more to come," he added.

He is expected to launch his first attacks on a guerilla basis to test enemy strength, an aide said, and after that will come "frontal battles."

Fawzi Bey said the Arabs' main project is to "quash the American decision to divide this country, and to subdue Zionism."

An aide said Fawzi Bey visited King Abdullah of Trans-Jordan en route to Palestine and was told by him:

"You may consider all the military resources of my country as being under your command."

9 Arabs Die in Clashes With British and Jews

Jerusalem, March 7 (U.P.).—Nine Arabs were killed and several wounded in separate clashes with British troops and with Jews in the Gaza area of southern Palestine, dispatches said today.

Two Arabs were killed in other outbreaks of violence and one Jew was burned to death in an armored car that Arabs attacked in the Jerusalem suburbs.

Four Arabs were killed and several wounded Saturday night near Gaza by British troops when Arabs attacked a two-truck military convoy.

Five Arabs were killed and one wounded seriously this afternoon in the same general area, dispatches said, in a clash with guards of a Jewish convoy.

Bulgar Sees Russia Preparing U.S. War

Dr. Dimitrov, Former Leader of Peasant Party, Says Italy Is Next Communist Goal

By the United Press

Russia is seeking control of all Europe to prepare for eventual war on the United States, a Bulgarian political refugee said yesterday.

Dr. Georgi M. Dimitrov, former leader of the Bulgarian Peasant Party, said his prediction stems in part from underground reports filtering to him from Soviet satellite nations in eastern Europe. These reports, he said in an interview, show that Italy—not finland—is the next Communist goal.

"The Communists won't be in a hurry in Fnland because they are just preparing a diversionary effort for a new and dangerous thrust at Italy," Dimitrov asserted. "And what is even more dangerous is that the events in Italy will be connected with similar moves in France, Germany, and Austria—this means all of Europe."

Dimitrov, a 45-year-old former doctor in Bulgaria who escaped from the Communist police in 1945 with American aid, is one of the leaders of the International Peasant Union, with headquarters here.

"Russia is trying to get all of Europe in an effort to create an iron wall between the Soviet Union and the United States," Dimitrov said. "Behind this wall, the Soviet Union hopes to quietly and securely prepare itself militarily and economically for the attack at the proper moment, which would be selected by Russia.

Like Hitler, they are trying to gain time to build up a European fortress."

Dimitrov said the Marshall European Recovery Plan is one important way of blocking Russian aims.

erating as they wish, would naturally find their place in the grouping of other European states.

["The same applies to Austria. The Ruhr would enter this framework with its own special regime."]

De Gaulle said the Germans are "paying dearly" for their war and for the Nazi leaders "whose instruments they were," but added that Germany is an "integral part of Europe . . ."

De Gaulle declared himself ready to lead France into the projected union and once more called for new elections. He attacked the regime of Premier Robert Schumann as "a vacillating state of general disorder."

"Present events order us to wait no longer," he said.

"Without falling into fatalism one can consider we are in one of those periods where everything is going to be decided and the turn of grave events will depend for a large part on what we French will be able to do in the coming days.

De Gaulle described the Communist coup in Czechoslovakia as "a grand flash of lightning . . . a warning to the French."

"Our country is menaced from the exterior by the expansion of an immense empire whose masters aim at world domination, is undermined from the interior by separatists in the service of these foreigners and who . . . fetter activity, aggravate all crises, infect all wounds and prepare their dictatorship," De Gaulle said.

"Soviet Russia is making her bid for domination," he declared.

It was General de Gaulle's first speech since January 4 and his second since last October when his organization, the Rally of the French People, scored successes in country-wide municipal elections.

ings on the economic end of it today.

In Senate debate, Senator Taft (R., Ohio) will take the floor for a formal speech on the European recovery measure this week. He is expected to urge it be trimmed to about four million dollars. Taft has said he is going along on the principle of providing aid for Europe but thinks $5,300,000,000 is too much to put in at the start.

Senator Ball (R., Minn.) said he thinks a group of Republicans who criticized parts of the program in last week's Senate debate will support the lower figure. Several Democrats have indicated they will go along.

An all-out attack on the program is expected from Senator Taylor (D., Idaho), scheduled to speak today. Taylor, who expects to be Henry Wallace's running mate on a third party ticket, said he will contend that the whole European aid program should be turned over to the United Nations.

State Dept. Urging Faster Action on ERP

By The Associated Press

State Department officials who say the Communists may make a big push in Italian elections next month are urging faster action in Congress on the European Recovery program.

The timing is of such concern in the Administration that it is understood to have come up for consideration at last Friday's Cabinet meeting—President Truman's first upon returning from vacation.

Dr. Marvin Outlines G. W. Future Plans

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, yesterday outlined progress of the institution's plans and described its future plans as he completed 20 years as the school's head.

The report, in book form, and entitled "A University in the Nation's Capital," is to be presented to about 16,000 graduates and more than 12,000 students now enrolled, members of the faculty and trustees.

The book outlines specific immediate needs, a new chemistry building, estimated to cost about $600,000; a new school of medicine building to match the new hospital, estimated to cost a million dollars; a new gymnasium to cost about $750,000; two class room buildings to cost about $400,000; four additional dormitories and school of dentistry building.

Prospectus of the university of the future shows its grounds bounded by Pennsylvania ave., New Hampshire ave., the Potomac River and F and 19th sts. nw.

A historical outline of growth of the university traces it from the founding as the result of a bequest by George Washington. The university was aided in its early days by the interest shown by President James Monroe and his Cabinet, including John Quincy Adams, as well as by the efforts of Luther Rice, Baptist leader, to raise funds for the school. In World War II, GWU operated a rocket plant at Cumberland, Md., and became noted for its work in theoretical physics.

New York Views Antique Autos, All of Which Run

New York, March 7 (U.P.).—Some 96 cars of ancient vintage chugged to a stop at New York's first antique auto show here today and the Big Town took a look at 50 years of automobile history.

The show, sponsored by the Veteran Motor Car Club of America, includes such nearly forgotten makes as Locomobiles, Stanley Steamers, Pope-Hartfords, Maxwells, Ramblers, Woods and Simplexes.

More recent models include Durants and Stars.

All the cars run—whether by gasoline, steam or electricity. The club is strict about that.

and "shadow boxing," and said:

"This is because of the nature of the Constitution which you declare Catholics will always faithfully uphold. The Constitution itself provides both for its amendment and its interpretation.

"The Catholic Church is now vigorously engaged in securing interpretations of the Constitution favorable to its union with the state in certain areas.

"If 'tomorrow' the church should possess the power, and had not meantime secured interpretations fully satisfying its demands, it could, and surely would, secure an amendment entirely repealing the separation of church and state as provided by the First Amendment. In doing so, it could still affirm its loyalty to the Constitution."

(Archbishop McNicholas in his reply had said, "there is no authoritative interpretation of the First Amendment, declaring unconstitutional Federal aid for children other than tax-supported schools. Our history shows many precedents of Government aid to private schools.")

POAU said it accepted "the hierarchy's challenge."

"The situation thus resolves itself into a political contest. The issue is not a religious one, in the sense that religious differenes are involved. It is a political issue.

"We propose to acquaint school boards, Legislatures, Congress and the courts with the fact that five-sixths of our country's citizens claim their constitutional right not to be taxed to support any church whose religion they do not profess . . ."

Conflict Admittedly Possible

POAU referred to Archbishop McNicholas' assertion that "hatred and conflict" may result from the controversy and said, "We admit this as a possibility, and would profoundly deplore it," but "three things need to be said:

"First, a timid shrinking from controversy is precisely the state of mind which the Roman Church would like to create in Protestants and all other non-Roman citizens . . .

"Second, if dissension arises in such form as to be deplorable, the responsibility for it will rest, not upon the resistance of Protestants and Other Americans United, but upon the Roman Church whose aggressions are the occasion of the dissension and upon the political authorities who yield to them . . .

"And third, if Protestants and other citizens do not now resist these aggressions, they will wake up to resist them when it is too late to resist them calmly."

The letters said that the Catholic hierarchy has actively supported "the so-called Taft bill" providing Federal aid to education. This measure would let each State decide whether such funds should be used for parochial schools.

Tax Slash Gains Support Of Sen. Aiken

By The Associated Press

The drive to slash income taxes gained another senatorial recruit yesterday.

Senator Aiken (R. Vt.) said he will support a cut "within reason"—probably of around $4,500,000,000. Aiken was one of a small group of Republicans who backed President Truman's veto last year when tax reductions were blocked, but he told a reporter conditions have changed.

"For one thing the President's estimates on surplus were so far off that I think a reasonable tax cut is safe now," Aiken said.

It is the Senate's move. The House passed a $6,500,000,000 tax cut. The question is before the Senate Finance Committee. It is nearing decision.

Two leading Democrats on the committee, Lucas (Ill.) and George (Ga.) predicted it will have a tax bill ready for the Senate within a week. Lucas appeared to have assured the forming of a strong committee majority for sending a bill out to the Senate when he said he would go along with a "reasonable cut of say four billion dollars." He opposed a cut last year.

Three other Democrats have said they will support a tax cut of some size. The are Barkley (Ky.), Johnson (Colo.) and George.

The committee will resume hearings Monday. Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) hopes to end them Wednesday or Thursday. Then he will hold closed sessions to vote on actual details of a bill.

Ickes Is Scheduled to Appear Today to Fight Tidelands Bill

By the United Press

Former Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes is scheduled to appear today before a Senate-House Judiciary Subcommittee in opposition to legislation that would establish clear State titles to the submerged coastal belt.

Montana Democrat Burton K. Wheeler, former Senator and ex-Judiciary Committee member, also is scheduled to testify against State control of the properties.

Both Ickes and Wheeler were called at the request of Senator Donnell (R., Mo.), a committee member who has opposed the pending bill during two weeks of hearings. Donnell has indicated belief that the 1947 Supreme Court decision settled the issue once and for all. The ruling gave the Federal Government "paramount rights" to California tidelands.

Donnell was expected to question Ickes extensively on the background of the Tidelands dispute. The former Cabinet member also faced questioning by a long-time antagonist, Senator McCarran (D., Nev.), another committee member.

In 1945, after insisting for 10 years that the Government owned the coastal belt, Ickes got United States Attorney General Francis Biddle to file suit against a California lease-holder. That suit was later abandoned and superseded by the Supreme Court suit against the State of California itself.

(See "People in the News," Page 2, for sketch of Ickes.)

NLRB Bars Alleged Union Coercion Case

An individual employe who challenged a CIO union's bargaining rights, then changed his mind, was permitted to withdraw his petition yesterday by the National Labor Relations Board.

The board's split decision overruled its regional officials, and declined to hear charges of the employer that the worker had been coerced by the union in recalling his petition.

The petition was filed by Edwin Baisley, an employe n the New York City warehouse of the Underwriters Salvage Co., operated by insurance firms to salvage damaged merchandise.

Baisley had asked, on behalf of several employes, that an election be held so the workers could throw out Local 65 of the CIO-Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employes as their bargaining agent. It was called a "decertification" case.

Two members of the board, James J. Reynolds and J. Copeland Gray, said that decertifications were "quite different" from other cases, and the board should hear the coercion charges. But the board majority, consisting of Chairman Paul M. Herzog, John M. Houston and Abe Murdock, applied a policy of the past 10 years and refused to hear evidence regarding alleged unfair labor practices in the course of a hearing on an election petition.

Tobey Calling More McCabe Witnesses

By the United Press

Chairman Charles W. Tobey (R., N. H.) yesterday disclosed plans to call several mystery witnesses before his Senate Banking Committee to testify on the fitness of Philadelphia Banker Thomas B. McCabe to be chairman of the Federal Reserve Board.

McCabe

President Truman nominated McCabe last month in a surprise move which demoted Marriner S. Eccles from chairman to vice chairman. Tobey promptly criticized the reshuffling, which Mr. Truman has doggedly refused to explain.

The New Hampshire Republican said yesterday the next session would be held "whenever McCabe wants it" to give the nominee a chance to reply to charges that he lost millions for the Government by mismanaging the Foreign Liquidation Commission which disposed of surplus war property abroad.

Tobey said McCabe had not yet picked a date for his rebuttal testimony, but added Wednesday was being "held open" on the committee calendar.

Asked whether the hearings would end with McCabe's testimony, Tobey said no. He said he "probably" would call "several" more witnesses, but refused to identify them.

Moving To Unity

Now that a preliminary pact on the internationalization of the Ruhr has been achieved, things will begin to move toward the consolidation of free Europe. This was the sine qua non. As Premier Spaak of Belgium made plain when the talks on European unity started at Brussels, the discussions were like playing Hamlet without the Prince. There could be no consolidation based on mutual help as long as the disposition of the Ruhr remained unclear. As soon as word arrived from London of agreement on Ruhr internationalization, the Brussels conference promptly decided on the first steps for the common defense of Europe.

The Ruhr is Europe's workshop. To demobilize it in the way envisaged by Mr. Morgenthau would have been to condemn it to slum existence. If it had been turned back to Germany, all the neighbors would have lived in fear of a revival of German militarism. In all the circumstances the French thesis in favor of internationalization made the most sense. It is tragic that so much time has been spent in laboring the obvious. The victory, however, is due to the Soviet Union rather than to the soundness of French logic. The devil's progress of the Soviet's Juggernaut state over Czechoslovakia marks the final warning that Soviet aggression will not be stopped till it runs up against an indigestible barrier. And such a barrier consists of consolidation in Europe backed by an American guaranty.

Only the vaguest decisions have been taken about the Ruhr. Perhaps a joint stock company will be promoted among the neighbors in association with Germany. Sovereignty will be German, and "a federal form of government, adequately protecting the rights of the respective states but at the same time providing for adequate central authority," is pledged. A coach and four could be drawn through this frame of reference. For ourselves the situation is such as to warrant dismemberment of Germany, with, possibly, the kind of nexus provided by a commonwealth system; but, apparently, the Allies insist on keeping to the letter of the Potsdam accord safeguarding German unity. We hope that the emphasis will be on such a decentralization of the constituent German states as will one day lead to separate membership in a European federation.

In the meantime the decisions in London and Brussels will hasten unification of the French zone in Germany with the Anglo-American zone and enable a German representative to sit with the 16 Marshall Plan countries in Paris. The weekend accomplishment helps to lighten the gloom over the troubled world.

Russia And ERP

Russian efforts to undermine the Marshall Plan are being aided and abetted by Senator Wherry and some of his like-minded colleagues who are opposed to any form of American assistance to Europe that would stimulate trade with Russia and her satellite states. Said Mr. Wherry: "If this is simply an economic development, which will enable those countries (receiving aid) within the next three or four years, to export their products and sell them to whomever they please, and we have no way to stop it, we are actually providing the wherewithal to build those industries so that the products can be sold wherever those countries choose to sell them. If that includes Russia, then the very purpose of the bill will be defeated."

On the contrary, the purpose of the Marshall Plan is to reach precisely the objective that Senator Wherry views with alarm. Of course, Marshall Plan aid will be given under certain safeguards against utilization for purposes inconsistent with the national interest of the United States. At present, however, it is to our interest to assist western European economic recovery, and that recovery will be hastened and will be much less costly to us if it is accompanied by a revival of trade between eastern and western Europe.

The Harriman Committee stated in its report that it was "impressed with the importance of reestablishing extensive trade between eastern and western Europe." The Senate Committee on Foreign Relations takes the same position. In fact, it points out that the restoration of this East-West trade is "one of the basic assumptions on which the participating [Marshall Plan] countries predicated their important requirements from the Western Hemisphere." The committee also quotes approvingly the State Department's opinion that western European recovery would be much slower and more difficult in the absence of such trade.

To convert the ERP into an agency for boycotting totalitarian regimes that we distrust would simply defeat our purpose. The emphasis that we have placed on economic recovery as the objective of our foreign-aid policy is based on the reasonable assumption that the surest preventive of war and the best defense against political upheavals lie in the restoration of peaceful commerce among nations. The short-sighted policy urged by Senator Wherry would dangerously increase existing political tensions and impose such restrictive and unreasonable conditions upon use of ERP funds as to constitute infuriating interference in the affairs of participating countries.

Electioneering In Italy

It is the tactics of counteraction to Soviet aggression that will count in the great West-Russian grapple. And tactics involve priorities—priorities which should be determined by the limitations of American resources, the significance of menaced situations, and the timetable. Use of influence in the right place at the right time is axiomatic. Looking over the world today, this newspaper feels that Italy, key to the Mediterranean, is the "live" front in the cold war. Italy is locked in an electoral struggle, and international communism is concentrating upon it. All reports that come to this office conclude on the grim note that the communized popular front, after having been on the defensive till a couple of months ago, may triumph when the Italians go to the polls on April 18. The De Gasperi government has not been able to match the aggressiveness that Communist leader Togliatti, backed by Moscow, has imparted into his campaign.

Time must be taken out of the present preoccupation with our own election to cope with the threat to the free world in Italy. April comes before November, and what happens in Italy in April is of the highest consequence to all fighters for liberty, particularly Americans. Without a doubt the consequences of a Togliatti victory in Italy would be reflected in our nominations and in our own election. How could it be otherwise? A Togliatti victory would mean that the Italians by their own volition had dragged the iron curtain to the west and opened their country to Moscow's rule. The implications of any such revolution should be well pondered. Not only would the Mediterranean be severed; the map of Europe would be changed. And in present circumstances this would mean a dagger into the heart of Marshall Europe while it is aborning.

This country simply cannot afford to lose Italy. Nor can Italy afford to lose America. But it will be too late to do anything about a Communist victory after the event. To be sure, such a victory in present circumstances would be a demonstration of what Professor Namier calls "Caesarian democracy." But that explanation would not justify action in the eyes of the American people. There would be no disposition to come to the aid of a people who had simply exchanged black for red slavery. This, it seems to us, should be made known to the Italian people. It should be a contribution to the electioneering that this country should embark upon in Italy—to let them know exactly where we stand, so that no illusions are entertained by the voting population.

Of course, there is need also to show Italy that our policy is still sympathetic with Italy's desire to return to the family of nations with self-respect. This newspaper opposed the ratification of the peace treaty with Italy both because of the changed world situation and because certain clauses were, in our opinion, unjust. The Administration chose the path of ratification. At the same time enough evidence of goodwill has been shown in the amelioration of the treaty provisions. Italy's case for admission to the United Nations has been pressed over Soviet opposition. Italy's colonial aspirations have had sympathetic attention. These matters, along with the unsettled question of Trieste, should be reviewed for the Italian people, and reopened in the Security Council. Congress and the Latin-American nations could help by some action to relieve the pressure of population caused by the piling up of unused quotas. But, over and above all, there must be left with the Italian people the plain reminder that a Soviet-dictated vote against the Marshall Plan—which would be what a vote for Togliatti would amount to—would mean a sacrifice of the benefits of the Marshall Plan. For Togliatti's apparent headway seems to be due not only to his new patriotic pose but also to his assurances that the Italian people would get the same aid from America no matter how they voted.

Michael

In London the other day former King Michael of Romania asserted in a formal public statement that his abdication at Bucharest on December 30 of last year was not voluntary but forced on him by the terroristic methods of the Communist masters of his country. The statement is, of course, important for the record; yet it merely confirms what all but the most infatuated of fellow travelers had already surmised. On New Year's, for example, immediately after the news of the abdication, we expressed on this page complete disbelief that Michael could have entertained or approved the sentiments contained in the act of abdication. To quote from the editorial—

> Reading between the lines, our guess is that in one of those mysterious ways that only the Kremlin has developed, an abdication was somehow "arranged," and that Michael for the time being is more or less a prisoner in Bucharest.

In his statement at London, Michael described precisely how the abdication was arranged. On the morning of December 30 Premier Groza, ostensibly head of a peasants' federation but actually a Communist puppet, and Deputy Premier Gheorghiu-Dej, came to the Royal Palace with the act of abdication. The palace had already been surrounded by armed forces. Michael was told by his ministers that they would hold him personally responsible for the bloodshed that might follow his refusal to sign the abdication. The abdication, in short, was obtained by violence and duress and Michael, quite properly, has repudiated it.

Some American minds which have not yet adjusted themselves to the Ogpu technique of coups d'etat may wonder why, since the Communists were already masters of the situation and might have disposed of Michael and his family by any method they pleased, they bothered to go through the farce of an enforced abdication. The answer is that they did it for the same reason they afterward forced President Benes of Czechoslovakia to accept a government comprised entirely of Communist puppets—that is, to give a pretense of legality to what was actually a stroke of conquest and usurpation. At this distance there are perhaps some who will say that Michael should have resisted to the end; but this would have been to sacrifice the lives of his loyal subjects and perhaps the lives of his family to no practical end.

The truth is that Michael, like Premier Mikolajczyk of Poland, showed great courage and sense of duty in returning to his country. In electing to escape from it, he has made it possible for a legitimate government of Romania to exist in exile. For of course the accomplices of the Kremlin who now rule at Bucharest have no legitimacy except the legitimacy of a treacherous conquest.

Government Annuities

The Washington Post publishes today the fourth and final installment of a pamphlet issued by the United States Civil Service Commission explaining how the recently enacted changes in the Civil Service Retirement Act affect about a million and a half Government employes. Of course, many details of this liberalized retirement system are of interest only to the Federal employes who are covered by it. But it also holds a general interest. For an adequate retirement system is one of the best possible methods of attracting into the Government service and keeping there responsible men and women who appreciate the value of this form of security.

The new law provides for a higher scale of pensions as well as simplified methods of computing annuities; it also increases the annuities of retired employes by 25 per cent or $300—whichever is the lesser sum. This will afford long-overdue, much-needed relief from the pressure of high living costs to many retired civil servants. Another outstanding feature is the provision made for wives, widows and children of annuitants. In the future, annuities will be payable to widows and minor children of employes who die in service after being employed five years or more. Much more liberal provision is also made for annuities to wives of retired employes who survive their husbands. Under the old law the widow could receive an annuity only if her husband named her as survivor-annuitant when he retired. If the husband died while still employed, neither his widow nor his children had any protection whatever.

In many other respects the law has been improved to correct inequities and unwitting discriminations, with the result that Government employes seem to us to be exceptionally well protected against the hazards of old age by comparison with other insured groups. However, Federal employes still lack insurance protection against unemployment, which is provided for private employes under the Social Insurance System. Ultimately it is to be hoped that the Civil Service retirement system will be tied in with a comprehensive system of social insurance that will increase the protection afforded Federal employes without depriving them of any of the benefits that they now enjoy.

The increased cost of the new retirement system will be borne to a large extent by the employes themselves, who will contribute 6 per cent (instead of the former 5 per cent) of their salary to the pension fund. The added cost to the Government during the first year of operation is estimated not to exceed 62 million dollars, while the cost is expected to drop to 15 or 20 million dollars after the first four or five years. These sums are an addition to the annual outlays, approximating 200 million dollars, which Congress appropriates for the retirement fund. But the aggregate cost of the retirement system to the Government is a comparatively small sum. Moreover, it is an investment that pays high dividends because it insures greater security for civil servants and, by heightening their morale, undoubtedly increases their efficiency.

WAVE

The wave of time rises
And from the crest,
In the foam's white flower,
We see the exploding bubble
Of the hour.
The wave of time
Has no familiar shore,
But the embroidered land,
The salt sea's barren sand
Have known that wave before.
The wave of time returns
And no one knows the moon
Whose silver shadow wakes
From noon the sleeping wave;
Nor where, nor when it breaks
Like jade that bends to frost,
And is forever lost.

Force Vs. Heart

Grace S. Yaukey, in her letter of February 29, says: "The real contest, as I see it, is not in terms of forceful aggression, as (Loy) Henderson puts it, but rather and only in terms of mental aggression or convincement." And she further avers: " . . . An ideology that can win against our democratic one must find an appeal to the heart stronger than ours."

How many countries can Miss Yaukey name whose Communist governments are governing by virtue of the Communist ideology having "found an appeal to the hearts" of a majority of the people?

We have just witnessed in Czechoslovakia—a country in which the Communist ideology had failed "to find an appeal to the hearts" of at least 62 per cent of the people—one more of a series of demonstrations of the ruthlessly forceful methods by which a Communist minority "seizes the power" of government. Consequent to that "seizure of power," we find in The Washington Post of February 29, in addition to Miss Yaukey's letter defining "the terms of the real contest," this news item:

"Prague, Feb. 28.—The new Communist government of Czechoslovakia cracked down today on the foreign press and continued its drive to purge the country of non-Communist leadership and policies."

I think, it would be well to reduce that phrase to "terms of fundamental meaning." It means that the Communist minority which has "seized the power" in Czechoslovakia, as have all other Communist minorities before it, intends to see to it that no other ideology will ever again be given a chance "to appeal to the hearts of the people."

Slaughtered Partisans

An illuminating sidelight on the Wannerstrum-Taylor controversy is contained in an Associated Press dispatch of February 20 which I failed to see in your columns. In that dispatch, Dr. Sava N. Kosanovich, Yugoslav Ambassador to the United States, scathingly arraigned the barbaric justification advanced by Judge Wennerstrum in defense of the leniency recently shown to eight Nazi generals by a war-crimes tribunal be headed in Nuernberg.

In explanation of the court's refusal to sentence the Nazis to death for having caused thousands of Greek and Yugoslav guerilla prisoners to be slaughtered in cold blood at the ratio of 100 for every German soldier killed and 50 for every German soldier wounded, this medieval-minded jurist formulated the following callous doctrine, which sounds like an echo of the Spanish Inquisition:

"German soldiers were victims of surprise attacks by an enemy which they could not engage in open combat. Certain units of bands in Yugoslavia and Greece complied with the requirements of international law, but the greater portion of partisan bands failed to comply with the rules of war entitling them to be accorded the rights of a lawful belligerent. Captured members of these unlawful groups were not entitled to be treated as prisoners of war. No crime can be charged properly against the defendants for killing such captured members of resistance forces."

Commenting on this declaration as "monstrous," the Yugoslav Ambassador reminded us that President Roosevelt and Prime Minister Winston Churchill during the war appealed to the peoples of the Nazi-occupied countries to resist the German invaders, and that they smuggled in arms, ammunition and military supplies for the guerilla warfare which this American judge now declares "put the resistance forces outside the pale of "civilized" warfare, deprived them of any right to be treated humanly and made it lawful and "proper" to massacre them without mercy.

This heartless decision was a shameful betrayal of some of our bravest allies.

Home Rule First

Deletion of portions of my letter relative to the use of the issue of national representation to defeat the Auchincloss plan for home rule, as published in your issue of March 1, had the effect of weakening my argument considerably.

In one part of my letter I referred to the fact that the Territory of Hawaii does not have representation in Congress or the electoral college, though it has a Legislature elected by the people, and the City of Honolulu has an elected local government of the customary American pattern. I also said that the fact that Hawaii can have national representation by becoming a State, while the District of Columbia cannot become a State, is an argument for amending the Constitution to provide for national representation for the District, not an argument for continuing the present un-American system of local government here.

In another place I said that if the foes of local suffrage succeed in defeating the Auchincloss plan with the argument that national representation should precede local self-government, they will also defeat our chances of obtaining national representation because it is inconceivable that Congress or any State Legislature would favor the representation in Congress or the electoral college of a community which does not have the right to govern itself according to traditional American principles.

Palestine Arms Embargo

The Jews are fighting for their very existence in a wholly unfair and unequal battle—and as a direct result of the United States arms embargo. Nowhere in the world can the Palestine Jews buy arms with which to defend their land. The Jews are up against Arab "brass knuckles."

Arab "brass knuckles" fortified indirectly by American war weapons are festering a fight this country wants expressly to prevent. For American arms are being sent to Pakistan, Iran and Turkey — and then immediately sold to the Arab legions in Palestine.

Not only are the Jews unable to purchase arms legally to defend their homes, but they cannot even rely upon the British "defenders" for support. It is becoming common knowledge that the British are fostering disorder, bloodshed, turmoil—and Jewish defeat in the Holy Land.

Why have the Jewish arms, confiscated from the Jewish warriors as contraband, been later found in captured Arab supplies? Why doesn't this country take rapid, constructive action to remedy the setup?

The arms embargo must be lifted so that Palestinian Jews can purchase arms legally and immediately. No men are needed—there are fighters enough. The U. N. decision to free Palestine can succeed least expensively by adopting that attitude now.

"Soviet Aims"

I was greatly surprised by what I consider a serious lack of discretion and acumen in your March 3 editorial on the foreign policy aims of the Soviet Union. If we were to accept your assumptions of the determining factors behind Russia's policies, then the conclusion drawn by your editorial would still be unjustifiable because it tends toward arousing an atmosphere of complacency which would necessarily decimate the firmness of action that you advise.

However, I find that I cannot agree with your assumptions in the face of existing facts. Your first assumption is that the Slav is by nature more comparable to an amoeba than to a bellicose Teuton. The history of the Slavic states contains a superfluity of jingoistic policies which have continually affected the history of western Europe since the sixteenth century. The Slavs have a heritage of determination which dates from Ivan the Terrible and which was greatly intensified by the periods of aggressiveness common to Peter the Great and other rulers.

Naturally Stalin, like Hitler, has certain aims which would be obtained most cheaply by peaceful means. But to the Soviet regime these aims are important enough to justify the hazards of resorting to forceful means for accomplishing them.

Secondly you assume that Russia could not support the destructiveness of an atomic war. It is probably true that Russia lacks the impressive production figures that the United States and Britain can display, but Russia's means of production are much the less vulnerable to atomic attack. This is true because more than one third of Russia's productive capacity and nearly all of her potential capacity for the manufacture of steel and the implements of war consists of recently constructed, strategically dispersed plants in the rugged terrain of the Urals.

Your third assumption is that the Soviet regime regards the United States as internally weak and rotten. There is very little evidence on either side of this question, but if it is to be accepted it invalidates the practical worth of your fourth assumption that the Soviets have a healthy respect for American productive strength. It is impossible to believe that the Soviets consider us redoubtable if they believe us to be intrinsically weak. The Soviets have frequently seen nations "disintegrate and collapse" in the face of impending crises, and they know that in such case all industrial potential is worthless.

It therefore seems to me essential that we at all times regard the Soviet Union as a nation whose aims are inimicable to the Western democracies, and that we regard the Soviets as having the potential necessary for obtaining these aims by either peaceful or belligerent means. In this manner we can assure ourselves of the degree of mental and physical preparedness necessary to surmount any future crises.

WELLSPRINGS OF THE AMERICAN SPIRIT, edited by F. Ernest Johnson. (Harper, $2.50.)
THE CHARACTER OF ENGLAND, edited by Sir Ernest Barker. (Oxford University Press, $10.)

Here we have two books almost identical in conception and remarkably different in content. Each is a symposium, and in each case the purpose is to examine the various aspects of a national genius. In both cases the approach of the symposiasts is mainly historical. The principal difference is that the English writers strive to explain the English ethos in its concrete manifestations, while the Americans tend for the most part to heady generalization. Sir Ernest Barker's book, which is far the more elaborate, contains a great many illustrations; in Professor Johnson's book there is none, and indeed its highly abstract character would have made illustration a rather difficult problem. Of 27 papers in Sir Ernest's collection only one is devoted to religion, while five of the 15 papers in Professor Johnson's collection seek to trace the influence of religion on American history and civilization. Here, however, the explanation may be that the American symposium was organized by the Institute for Religious and Social Studies of Jewish Theological Seminary.

Curiously enough, several of the English writers are at pains to emphasize the influence of Puritanism on English thought, as in the case of the Cambridge Platonists, and on English letters, as in the case of Milton and Bunyan, and on British imperial history as for example in the development of the British navy and the expansion of overseas commerce. Professor Schneider of Columbia, however, inclines to discount the permanent influence of New England Puritanism on American civilization. The real Puritanism, he tells us, died rather early. It was a crisis theology arising out of the sense of human impotence and utter dependence on divine grace. As such, it could scarcely survive the complacency engendered by increasing prosperity. In eastern Massachusetts, under the influence of the Enlightenment it gave way to Unitarianism, Transcendentalism, Universalism and other optimistic creeds; elsewhere, after the era of the great revivals, Puritanism assumed a pietistic character in which its peculiar theology and temper were lost. Thus the true Puritanism must be distinguished from "the genteel tradition," which the professor considers to be merely the characteristic ancestor worship of subsequent generations of cultivated and prosperous Yankees. But in the looser sense in which Puritanism may be said to include all those forms of Protestantism which rejected the Anglican discipline and usage, its influence on the development of American political institutions was apparently very great. In the Middle and Southern States, says Professor McNeill of the Union Theological Seminary, the hostility of the dissenting sectaries to the Colonial establishments made them highly receptive to the governmental theories of John Locke. This of course was by no means the case of the Puritan clergy of New England where the Congregational Churches were established by law.

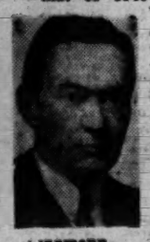
Generally speaking, however, the principle of separation was the point at which the influences of Evangelical Protestantism and those of the Enlightenment converged, but whether the religious or the rationalistic element was the stronger is a matter of some dispute. Professor Gabriel of Yale, seems to indicate that most of the important men of the Revolution and the early Republic were deists, but the Jesuit Father Hartnett of Fordham strives to prove that all, with the exception of Jefferson, were Christians of more or less orthodox beliefs. There seems to be similar disagreement about the extent to which three centuries of a shifting frontier have determined the psychological climate of America, but in this our symposiasts merely echo the controversy which for some years has been agitating the departments of American history. Professor Rugg of Columbia Teachers' College appears to accept the doctrine of the school of the late Professor Turner that the influence of the frontier has been decisive, and continues to be so, now that the frontiers are sociological rather than geographic. But Professor Randall of Columbia considers that the American Spirit owes quite as much to immigrants of the great coastal cities as to the pioneers of the prairies and backwoods, for it was in the cities that a modus videndi among persons of the most diverse origins, cultures and languages had to be discovered. Professor McNeill, seems inclined to believe that the peculiar characteristics of the frontiersman were, like his religion, a heritage from his Scotch Border ancestors.

The English symposiasts for the most part shy away from such speculations; and if, for example, they take note of the influence of climate on their national history and character it is merely to relate it as quickly as possible to such congenial subjects as cricket lawns, gardens, the wool-weaving industry, the evolution of the public house, the poetry of Shakespeare and the landscapes of Constable and Turner. They are content to pride themselves on passive and personal characteristics such as humor, compassion, poetic instinct and reverence for eccentricity, leaving the work of moralizing to their Symposiarch, Sir Ernest. He struggles with it bravely; but where the Americans are by turns exalted and oppressed by their sense of mission and destiny, he seems haunted by the fear that what his book describes is after all a vanished world.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Election
IV. Taft, Dewey And Vandenberg



Lippmann

OF THE four elections in which the Republican Party was defeated by Roosevelt, the third—that of 1940 when Wendell Willkie was the candidate—is, I think, the one which is the most instructive today. After 12 years of Republican Administration and in the midst of very bad times there was nothing particularly unusual about the Democratic victories of 1932 and 1936. No Republican could have won those elections just as no Democrat could have won the election of 1920.

Nor was the 1944 election, which was lost by a fairly narrow margin, particularly significant in view of the very special circumstance that Governor Dewey had to contest it with President Roosevelt at the climax of the war.

BUT 1940 was a critical test. The conventions and the campaign took place in the darkest and most dangerous period of the war: just after the fall of France, during the Battle of Britain, and before the United States was committed. Both party conventions responded in an extraordinary way to the enormous crisis of that spring and summer.

The Democratic Party broke with the tradition which had been in effect an untouchable part of the unwritten constitution of the United States. It nominated a President for a third term. The Republican convention responded to the crisis in a no less extraordinary way: it nominated a man who had never been in Republican politics, who eight years earlier had been active in the Democratic convention, a man who stood for the very things to which the party was opposed: a supporter of the League of Nations and of aid to Britain and an opponent of isolationism.

THE NOMINATION of Willkie by the Republican convention was an admission that the Republican Party's record and position did not fit the crisis of the war. But after the initial enthusiasm for Willkie, it soon transpired that he could not alter the position of his party and that therefore he could not lead it effectively. Willkie's nomination was, so to speak superficial, not the result of a genuine change of the party's position on the American interest in the vital issues of war and peace.

Roosevelt's third election was made conceivable, then plausible, then acceptable, and finally inevitable, because it was plain not only to the Democrats but to many normally Republican voters that as a party the Republicans were unprepared to govern in the crisis of the war. There was Willkie, to be sure, but quite evidently he did not truly represent his party, and Republicans like Stimson, Austin, Wadsworth, were at best a tolerated minority.

THE QUESTION this year is whether the Republican Party has been sufficiently reconditioned and realigned to do now, what it was unprepared to do in 1940—to rise to the great issues of war and peace. It could happen, to be sure, that the question could be evaded if, as is not inconceivable, the Truman Administration continues to disintegrate. But even if that were to happen, it would not be safe for the Republican Party to evade the question. For though it might muddle through to a victory over Truman, it cannot hope to muddle through the next critical years with a party that has not been firmly united under strongly organized leadership.

The next four years will surely bring the showdown in which it is decided whether the second world war is to be settled. This could mean war. It could mean peace. It could mean neither war nor peace but an increasing disunity and a spreading anarchy. There is no need here to labor the argument of how much depends on what this country does do and does not do, on how wisely and resolutely its power and its influence are used.

THE PRECONVENTION politics of the Republican Party turn upon whether the party can unite under strongly organized leadership. It is not now united. But there are two centers, two nuclei—one identified with Senator Taft and the other with Governor Dewey—which have still to coalesce, one absorbing the other.

Broadly speaking, but nevertheless, I think, accurately, if the party organizes around Taft, it will mean that its main position is still fundamentally prewar. If it organizes around Dewey, either by nominating him or, failing that, a candidate from the same political family, then it will mean that the main position of the party has changed.

WE CAN SAY, I believe, that the Eisenhower boom, the Stassen following, Dewey's organized strength, and the growing interest and confidence which Vandenberg arouses—are all politically related. They are the components out of which the postwar Republican Party may be organized. The rivalries are not profound, being due much more to personal likes and dislikes, and to normal conflicts of ambition, than to difference of conviction and purpose.

Moreover, one may say, I think, that the core of this new party leadership is in the relationship between Dewey and Vandenberg. It would be rash to predict how this relationship will evolve. But it does look as if only they together could unite the party successfully.

IT SEEMS as certain as anything in politics can be that Taft, if nominated, could not unite the party. Conceivably the Republicans might win the election with Taft, but only because Truman was weaker than he now appears to be, not through Taft's own political strength. The people who wanted Eisenhower, who want Stassen, who are looking to Vandenberg, and a very great number who are for Dewey, could have no enthusiasm for Taft. They could at most give him party regularity.

On the other hand, Dewey, supported as one may assume he would be by Vandenberg, could without great difficulty reach into Taft's following and coalesce with all but the most unreconstructed isolationist remnants. Vandenberg, as a reconstructed isolationist who has become the most effective figure in American postwar foreign affairs, is the easiest man for the old Republicans to follow. For he has himself followed the path that they do not like to take but nevertheless have to take, and as they look at the honor and affection in which he is held, they can see that changing one's views is not so disagreeable after all.

THERE IS, of course, another way by which the party could be united and confirmed in a postwar position. Instead of by Dewey, with the support of Vandenberg, it could be by Vandenberg himself with the support of Dewey.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The State Of Mr. Truman

THE MISERIES OF Harry S. Truman are becoming so numerous that it is almost inhuman to report them. Nonetheless, it is an inevitably significant political fact that the President has more misery in store for him when the greatest satraps of the Democratic Party gather in Washington March 11. This is the date of the meeting of the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee. Several of its members have already let it be known that they will seize the opportunity to tell the President a few home truths.

The opinion that home-truth-telling is needful arises from the change in the man Truman which the satraps also complain of. Initially, Truman seemed actually to dislike the immense burden that has been laid upon him. There followed a period when he simply and rather admirably resolved to bear the burden as best he could. The results of this approach to his duties were good. These good results were in turn gratifying, and now the satraps complain that the President is suffering from a bad case of presidentiti

NOTHING IS MORE difficult to penetrate than the obscurity which inevitably surrounds the personality and state of mind of a President. It does seem to be true, however, that the President has met his recent misfortunes, his run of bad luck and his chickens coming home to roost with a curious mixture of complacency and sense of being unjustly persecuted. He is no longer so eager to be advised as in the past. He is not even aware how desperate his political situation is. Indeed he has no one to tell him how bad things are, for the voices of the few really competent men with continuing access to the White House are daily drowned by the smoking-car jollity of Major General Vaughan and the smooth reassurances of the pursy Dr. Steelman.

The first stage of the satraps' reaction to this situation will be to beat the President over the head with the grim facts. It may be expected they will tell him he has almost irretrievably lost the South. (There is a faint hope that the Southerners may be wooed back by naming a Southern Vice President and re-using the 1944 civil rights plank in the 1948 convention platform. But even this hope is too dim to be voiced with real enthusiasm.) What is almost worse, the satraps will also tell the President that he is losing the mass vote in the North and that nothing can win this vote back except strong leadership.

The difficulty is that telling the President large numbers of home truths like these, even in the loudest and most menacing possible voice, will neither alter the man nor simplify his problem. At this juncture, in the opinion of the most competent Democratic strategists, there is really nothing much that the President can do to restore himself. The real price of the Southerners is the removal of Truman from the head of the ticket. The only real means of regaining Northern mass support, in present circumstances, is actually to put through the social and other measures which the President has advocated, and he would have to jail most of the Congress to pass these measures.

The strategists close to the White House count on the inevitable worsening of the foreign situation to bring their man back, but the more impartial Democrats are even unable to see hope in this grim remedy. "Truman isn't the kind of man," one of them admitted bitterly the other day, "that people think they've got to keep in office just because there's a crisis."

IF ALL THIS IS SO, it is necessary to look forward to still another stage. The great Democratic satraps made Truman, and he has not used the Presidency in such a way as to prevent them from un-making him. On a recent trip around the country, one of the President's closest political advisers was shocked to discover how many party leaders wistfully speculated on whether Truman might not be induced to step aside in favor of General Eisenhower. For the present, of course, this is a mirage. But for the future it will certainly have meaning.

It does not mean, of course, that General Eisenhower is any more likely to want to run as a Democrat than as a Republican. Nor does it mean that the President will actually be replaced at the head of his party's ticket in the election. It is simply a sign of very bad trouble ahead. The Southern Governors are meeting immediately after the Ed Kellys, Frank McHales, Ed Flynns et al., gather in Washington for the satraps' rally. It is almost inevitable that the satraps' best efforts will not disclose a formula short of sidetracking Truman, for bringing the South into line again. The real trouble will start at the Governors' meeting when the Southern rebellion is quite likely to become formal and official.

Then, if the deterioration continues, at least a few of the Northern satraps are quite likely to make the President request a successor. The betting is still 10-to-1 that the Democrats at Philadelphia will nominate Truman. But after these preliminaries, the convention should be a somewhat melancholy gathering.

4 Defense Chiefs to Discuss UMT With Senators Today

By The Associated Press

A new effort is under way to get the election-year Congress moving on the touchy issue of universal military training.

The four top-ranking national defense officials have been called to a closed door session of the Senate Armed Service Committee today. Chairman Chan Gurney (R., S. Dak.) said UMT would be discussed, but declared he could not forecast what would be done.

Secretary of Defense Forrestal heads the group to attend the strategy huddle. With him will be Secretary of Army Royall, Secretary of Navy Sullivan and Secretary of Air Symington.

Senators have been reluctant to begin committee sessions on the vast peacetime training program.

A House Armed Forces Committee completed hearings last year, and recommended action. But the bill has been held up for months in the House Rules Committee by Chairman Allen (R., Ill.). Leaders reported no change in the situation.

Senator E. V. Robertson (R., Wyo.), an advocate of UMT and a member of the Senate Armed Service group, told a reporter Senators still hope for initial action in the House. He said new proposals for a greatly expanded air force have complicated the problem.

"I think we need both," he said, "but I'm not certain we can afford both."

Estimates for the larger air force run as high as five billion dollars a year while UMT might cost another four billion dollars.

PAC Backs Ban On Air Editorial

By the United Press

The CIO Political Action Committee yesterday asked the Federal Communications Commission to retain its rule forbidding radio broadcasters to editorialize.

Charging that labor has received "shaddy treatment" at the hands of radio commentators and station owners in the past, Director Jack Kroll wrote the FCC:

"I hesitate to think what would happen when the bars are lifted and a few men in key position are given the power to beam their views to America's radio audiences."

The FCC has been holding lengthy hearings to decide whether it should revise the seven-year-old ruling against editorializing. Before the hearings were recessed Saturday until April 10, after the A. F. L. went on record with a proposal that broadcasts be permitted to air their own views provided they were required to grant equal time to those wishing to present opposite opinions.

274 Stranded On Transport Criticize Army

New Orleans, March 7 (AP).—Passengers stranded for six fog-bound days before removal from the grounded transport Pvt. W. H. Thomas at the mouth of the Mississippi river criticized today the Army's "fumbling around."

Port of embarkation officials here, however, insisted they evacuated the 274 passengers, including 53 women and children, as quickly as safety permited. The ship was returning Army personnel and dependants from overseas.

Passengers agreed on two complaints:

1. Ship officers kept them in the dark about what was going on, and 2. delayed too long before starting evacuation.

Army captains expressed a belief the Army "fumbled around" in indecision.

Many said they were given only five minutes warning to leave ship. But they admited food and service were good while they were stranded.

Maj. Robert Walker, port of embarkation official, said the Army rushed every type of rescue equipment in New Orleans to the scene. He explained foul weather, days of fog, heavy ocean swells upset efforts to fre the ship.

"It would have been almost suicidal to take them off under those conditions," the major said.

2 Workers Die, 29 Injured In Plant Blast

Waltham, Mass., March 7 (AP).—Two men were killed, two are missing and 29 others injured when a midnight explosion that could be heard for 10 miles leveled a plastic factory.

The bodies of the two workmen were removed from the wrecked Interlake Chemical Corp. two-story cement and stucco plant late today as rescuers worked with a power shovel to clear the rubbles.

Both bodies were so badly charred they could not be identified immediately.

Fire Chief B. A. Neal said apparently most of the survivors were blown clear, some 50 feet in the air.

He said a few of the men found shortly after the explosion were wandering around in the nude. He guessed they might have been in the shower room.

The explosion and fire left the sprawling plant of the Interlake Chemical Corp.—which makes "Makalot" plastic dishes and novelties—a seared mass of girders and heavy machinery piled 8 feet deep.

Chief Neal estimated damage at $150,000. An investigation cause to determine the cause of the blast was begun. Five of the 29 hospitalized were on the danger list because of severe burns. Nine were discharged after treatment.

Residents of nearby communities thought an earthquake had occurred.

Supreme Court Resumes Today; Union Rulings Due

The Supreme Court returns to the bench today after a three-week recess, with labor interests anxiously awaiting a clew to its thinking on restrictive labor laws.

In the absence of a test of the Taft-Hartley Act, union leaders want the court to rule on a challenge of the constitutionality of the Colorado Labor Peace Act of 1943.

The test is among 57 cases facing the court. At this point a year ago the tribunal had delivered 66 formal decisions as against only 37 so far this term.

Other major issues awaiting rulings include several civil liberties cases. Outstanding among these are three suits assailing real estate covenants that bar Negroes and other minorities from all-white neighborhoods.

Freedom of religious belief is the issue in a Champaign Ill., case which may be acted on today. The court must decide if the religious classes conducted in public schools there violate the constitutional separation of the state and religion.

The expedition, under join sponsorship of the Chicago manufacturer and the Boston Museum of Science, plans to use radar to measure lofty Amne Machin near Tibet to determine if it is higher than Mount Everest.

New Dry Cell Battery Stacks Up in Series

New Haven, Conn., March 7 (AP).—The electrical division of Olin Industries today announced a new dry cell battery.

Each battery is a single cell, the shape of a postage stamp and deep as a match folder. One cell is about a volt-and-a-half.

The cells are tray-shaped, with bottoms that fit into the tops of similar trays, so that they can be stacked like pancakes. Stacking adds to the voltage. A stack of 15 would be 30 volts.

Hearings Open Today on Repeal of Oleo Tax

By The Associated Press

The House Agriculture Committee opens formal hearings today on legislation proposing to eliminate special Federal taxes on oleomargarine, first levied in 1899. There are no fewer than 18 bills now in Congress proposing its repeal.

A. L. M. Wiggins, Undersecretary of the Treasury, will be the first witness. He will tell how the Administration feels about the oleo tax.

The two sides had a few things to say in advance. Representative Poage (D., Tex.), author of one of the 18 bills, told reporters "It is utterly unsound to tax any wholesome food to the benefit of another. It is the only Federal special tax on the statute books levied against a wholesome food." The Texan predicted that all 11 Democratic members of the House Agriculture Committee would vote to repeal the tax.

But Representative Murray (R., Wis.), from a great dairy State, said, "This margarine tax is for the general welfare of the people of the United States. This fight against butter is an entering wedge that jeopardizes the whole dairy industry."

Oleo taxes now are: $600 a year on each manufacutrer; $480 on each wholesaler of colored oleo; $200 for each wholesaler of the uncolored product; $48 on each retailer of colored oleo; $6 on each retailer of the uncolored product. These levies are in addition to 10 cents a pound on each retail sales of colored oleo; ¼ cent a pound on the uncolored product.

There's New Glamour in the Way it Goes

TAKE the glamour of its tapered gracefulness for granted, if you will. One glance tells you it's tops.

Take an inside peek at its newly fashioned interiors – and see if you're not dazzled by the luxury that greets your eyes.

But wait – just wait – till you learn what makes this banner beauty run off with the year's high honors on the highway. Dollars to drachmas – you'll fairly itch to get in and GO!

For now your right foot commands a Fireball power plant that's as eager as a panther on the prowl – yet is so quieted in purr and pulse you barely sense its telltale throb.

Now you slip through traffic or light out cross-country as relaxed as a baby with his bottle – in a body that's bountifully big, cozily cushioned, and insulated against the usual noises of traveling.

Now you experience the first scientific system ever devised to shield a car's ride against road noise, shake and the vibration build-up that previously took advantage of an automobile's tendency to play sound box.

Now you ride the washboard roads and cobbles as though they were carpet – thanks to coil springs all around – plus extra-low-pressure tires, carried on Buick's own wider, more stable Safety-Ride rims.

And last but best, if a Roadmaster's your choice, you can enjoy the really effortless driving – in a new kind of drive that not only frees you of gearshifting, but that doesn't even shift itself!

It's Dynaflow Drive* – a drive that's devoid of all halt, lag and hesitation through all speed ranges – because here, for the first time, the power plant itself does what gears used to do.

Fact is, you'll find the new Buick sparkling with more than a score of new advances – in ten brilliant models that span three series and give you your choice of three wheelbases and four power ratings.

So why dally? Here, certainly, is the dilly of the year for smartness and roominess – for the newest in driving ease and riding relaxation – and for all those basic bounties that are forever Buick's.

Place your order with your dealer now – whether or not you have a car to trade – and hasten the day when you'll reach those motoring heights you hanker for.

*Optional at extra cost on Roadmaster models only.

When better automobiles are built BUICK will build them

Tune in HENRY J. TAYLOR, Mutual Network, Mondays and Fridays

BUICK alone has all these features

DYNAFLOW DRIVE—smooth, silken flow of power with no gears ever shifting either manually or mechanically. (Optional, Roadmaster Series)

TAPER-THRU STYLING—distinctive, tapering car-length fenders set a fashion of standout beauty.

VIBRA-SHIELDED RIDE — smooth, fatigue-free ride from scientific curbing of vibration build-up.

HI-POISED FIREBALL POWER — valve-in-head straight-eight engines in four power ratings, now cradled to new smoothness.

SAFETY-RIDE RIMS — check heel-over on turns; better car control, peak mileage and lower tire pressures.

QUADRUFLEX COIL SPRINGING — level-going buoyancy from a soft coil spring on each wheel.

SOUND-SORBER TOP LINING—insulated for new "conversation tone" quiet. (Super and Roadmaster Models)

DUOMATIC SPARK ADVANCE — vacuumatic plus centrifugal action ensures exact ignition for peak engine efficiency.

TEN SMART MODELS — in three series, featuring Body by Fisher and smart new interiors.

Anti-Truman Bill Due for Va. Action

Richmond, Va., March 7 (AP).—Two of Governor Tuck's prime recommendations — the anti-Truman elections bill and State governmental reorganization—top a heavily-laden docket of legislation awaiting action in the final week of the 1948 General Assembly's regular session.

The thrice-revised presidential elections bill, by which Mr. Tuck would reserve for the State Democratic convention the right to repudiate the national party's nominee and yet retain title to the party label in Virginia, is expected to win favorable action by the House Committee on Privileges and Elections tomorow or Tuesday.

Passage Expected

It faces some opposition in both branches of the Assembly, but Tuck administration sources now seem confident that the usual majority of assemblymen in the dominant organization camp can be mustered to put the bill through.

Both House and Senate reconvene at noon tomorrow.

Six subcommittees have been at work on various phases of the reorganization bill which originally sought to compress, merge and rearrange some 70-odd State agencies into 14 major departments and three auxiliary agencies.

Although the substitute elections bill submitted last week eliminated most of the original measure's controversial features—the substitute lets both nominees and party names be listed on the ballot and affords a way for almost any party or group to get its candidates on the ballot—some nonorganization Democrats still regard it with skepticisf or outright opposition.

Poll Tax Bill Awaits Action

Aside from the Tuck bill, another controversial elections issue awaits Assembly action this week: The constitutional amendments to repeal the poll tax as a voting prerequisite and make other electoral changes. Legislation embodying the poll tax and other revisions was passed by the 1946 Assembly. The same resolution, with no changes, must be approved this session if it is to be submitted to vote of the people next November.

Now pending in the House of Delegates with the backing of a favorable report by privileges and elections committee, the resolution has been by-passed several times to let the House dispose of other matters. Objections to it center not so much around poll tax repeal as against other phases such as annual reregistration and writing a powerful State board of elections set-up into the constitution.

To Address Ad Club

Senator Owen Brewster (R., Me.) and Represeniative Carl Hinshaw (R., Calif.) will speak in "America's New Air Policy" at a luncheon meeting of the Advertising Club of Washington tomorrow at 12:30 p. m. at the Hotel Statler.

Ross Lockridge, Best-Seller Author, Ends Life in Indiana

Bloomington, Ind., March 7 (AP). Ross Lockridge, jr., 33, author of "Raintree County," best-selling novel, died last night in his garage.

Mr. Lockridge

Dr. Robert E. Lyons, jr., coroner of Monroe County, declared death was suicide by carbon monoxide posoning.

The author's body was found slumped over the wheel of his automobile in the lighted garage by his wife, Vernice.

Work Caused Breakdown

The writer's father, Ross Lockridge, sr., said that his son's work on his successful first novel had resulted in "a complete breakdown."

"He put his whole heart into his book," the elder Lockridge said. "He was utterly exhausted."

The author's mother said, "He might have had a temporary blackout. We don't feel that he contemplated doing such a thing."

Lyons said the widow told him Lockridge had gone out earlier in the evening to mail some letters but said he would be back to listen to the radio broadcast of a basketball game.

Ray Collier, rescue truck driver, said Mrs. Lockridge had called firemen and said that they would have to break a lock on the garage door to get in.

Father Took Body Out

Police Capt. Ray Branum said the author's father arrived before the firemen, forced the door of the garage, and took the body out. Firemen tried unsuccessfully to resuscitate him.

"Raintree County" won Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's $125,000 novel award and was the January Book-of-the-Month Club selection. A historical novel about a fictitious Indiana County, it was high on the best seller list.

Survivors include the wife and four children, the oldest 9. They are Ernest, Larry, Jeanne and Ross 3d.

Organization Outlined to Mobolize U. S.

By the United Press

The first blueprint of the organization which will seek to prepare the United States for instant, all-out mobilization in event of another war was made public yesterday by the National Security Resources Board.

The board, under the chairmanship of Arthur M. Hill, former Greyhound bus executive, is charged under the Armed Forces Unification Act with drawing up plans for military, industrial and civilian mobilization of the Nation. The organizational structure announced today will permit the board to map plans to bring every phase of the Nation's life into line in event of a future M-Day.

Twenty-four separate divisions are the basis of this far-reaching program. Twenty of them are called "mobilization planning staff" divisions. Their task is fourfold:

1. To help develop the basic principles underlying a future mobilization, evaluate the "political requirements," figure out the Nation's resources and ways to overcome deficiencies, and to develop specific policies and plans for mobilization.

2. To prepare reports for the board, which is made up largely of members of the President's Cabinet, and to coordinate the work of Government agencies with private organizations.

3. To develop and evaluate legislation, executive orders and regulations for mobilization.

4. To consider overall problems such as stockpiling, civilian defense, strategic relocation and scientific and technological developments.

Army Recruiting Drive Backed

A Nation-wide program to mobilize local communities behind the voluntary enlistment drive of the United States Army and the Air Force was announced jointly yesterday by six major national organizations.

National officers of the American Legion and its auxiliary, the Elks, Eagles, Kiwanis, Lions and Junior Chamber of Commerce said the plan includes formation of military manpower committees in every town and city.

Under the program, these committees will act "to build public knowledge of the urgent manpower need of the Army and Air Force and to put the force of public action behind the local recruiter." The organizations cite a combined membership of 6,978,000 in more than 49,000 local units.

Groups other than the six listed are expected to participate locally.

Current quotas for the two services total 30,000 volunteers a month.

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

ORLANDO, FLA., MARCH 7.—The hitting coach of the Nats is a 78-year-old ex-pitcher whose authority is unquestioned because he happens to own the ball club. On the roster he is listed as Clark Griffith, president, but he fancies himself as the team's greatest authority on hitting, and he probably is.

POVICH

Right now he is occupying himself with restoring some of the vigor to the bat of his first baseman, Mickey Vernon, who slumped 85 points last season after leading the league year before with an average of .353. He saw Vernon's slump coming, he says, long before last season opened.

"I didn't like the way he was hitting even when he was leading the league," says Griffith. "I want to tell you, he was the luckiest hitter I ever saw when he was batting up around .350. I was glad to see his luck keep up that year, but I knew it couldn't last. He has got to change his batting swing."

Vernon was getting too many hits to left field when he was having his best year, says Griffith. "He wasn't a natural left field hitter like Cecil Travis," the Nats' owner points out. "Vernon's hits were dropping in there, but the law of averages had to catch up with him, and did last season."

GRIFFITH PRIDES HIMSELF on his knowledge of hitting. "How do you think I won 20 games or more for eight years in a row with the old Chicago Cubs in the National League and then led the American League in pitching in 1901?" he asks.

"I was just a little fellow with a curve ball, and I had to study those hitters or I'd get by brains knocked out. I pitched against all the great ones—Wagner, Lajoie, Cobb, the Delehantys, Jess Burkett and those other bruisers who were better than the DiMaggios and the Williams' of today. I knew a little bit about hitting myself, too. Don't bet that I didn't hit .300 in a couple of years when I was a pitcher. Out there pitching, I knew what made great hitters great. They didn't have any faults, like Vernon."

No good hitter ever turned one hand loose from the bat near the end of his swing like Vernon has been doing, Griffith says. "Mickey is a nautral pull hitter but he thinks he can punch that ball instead of swinging through. He's overlooking his big asset—that pull swing to right field. I'm telling him to keep pulling no matter what average he hits for."

GRIFFITH THINKS HE understand's Vernon's troubles. He smacks that ball hard into right field and they come up with it and he loses a hit, and he gets discouraged," says the Nats' owner. "But the law of averages is in favor of the hitter who can pull the ball as hard as Vernon can. The pitchers know it, so they try to pitch him outside where he can't pull. They're afraid of the same pull swing that Vernon hasn't been using."

"And another thing," says Griffith, "Vernon worries too much. I've seen 'em before—these worriers. They begin to think of the salary cut they're gonna take when their averages go down. Then the pressure is on 'em, and they're all confused. They go hitless for a day or two and start thinking about next year's contract. That's no good. They got to have a different philosophy.

"The good hitters don't worry when they go hitless. They take it as part of the game and don't think about slumps. Ruth and Simmons and Goslin weren't unhappy if they went four for zero any day. They always knew no pitcher could keep 'em down, and that kind of confidence made 'em better hitters. Vernon would be better off if he would rationalize these things."

AS A CONFIDENCE-inspiring gesture, Griffith has told Vernon to swing away and forget his batting average. Griffith will take the responsibility, he says, if Vernon doesn't get the hits while swinging according to the Griffith plan. "Maybe that will help him snap out of it," says the Nats' owner.

If Vernon hits as much as .300, Griffith thinks the Nats will have the most valuable first baseman in the league. "He's the best target to throw at in either major league," says Griffith. "I've never seen anything like him when it comes to taking bad throws of all kinds and the infielders ought to like the whole idea of throwing to first base with him around."

He has another appreciation of Vernon "I never saw a big man like him who kept in such wonderful shape all the time. He didn't miss a game with us last season. Never complained of anything except his batting average. Never any trouble with his legs, big as he is. He's a physical marvel and he could be a valuable hitter if . . . well, if he listens to me."

Giants Get Five Runs in 10th to Beat Indians, 13-8

Phoenix, Ariz., March 7 (AP).—In a long-winded exhibition game, the Cleveland Indians put o na five-run storm in the tenth inning to defeat the New York Giants, 13 to 8.

The Giants used 22 men and the Indians 18 in the game.

Walker Cooper hit the Giants' first home run of the year, with a man on base in the third

Al Rosen clouted a two-run homer for the Indians in the fourth, and Pat Seery of the Indians hit a solo home run in the eighth.

Cubs Win on Homers

Los Angeles, Calif., March 7 (AP).—Two home runs gave the Chicago Cubs a 2-to-1 victory over the Chicago White Sox today—their second win over their crosstown rivals in two days.

Rookie Earl York homered in the second inning and Clarence Maddern, outfielder recalled from the West Coast Angels, also pushed one out of the park in the sixth. York, a first baseman, also homered yesterday. Maddern also singled twice with none out, but was unable to score.

Bucs Outslug Browns

San Bernardino, Calif., March 7 (AP).—The Pittsburgh Pirates outslugged the St. Louis Browns, 12 to 11, today in a game which opened the spring exhibition schedule for both teams.

The thirty hits poled by the two teams included home runs by Les Moss and Andy Anderson of the Browns and a pair of triples by Johnny Hopp of the Pirates. A double by Stan Rojek and a single by Wally Westlake produced the the winning run in the ninth.

Bums Add Heusser

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, March 7 (AP).—Branch Rickey announced today that 38-year-old Ed Heusser of the Montreal Royals had been added to the Brooklyn Dodger roster. Such a move had been expected as Heusser has been working out with the Dodgers although under contract to Montreal. He won 19 and lost 3 in the international league last year.

Rickey also announced that Roy Campanella, Negro catcher for Montreal, would be tried in the outfield this season.

Tigers' Game Off

Lakeland, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Rain today forced a postponement of the Detroit Tigers' first spring exhibition game with the Cincinnati Reds at Tampa.

Manager Steve O'Neill said the delay would have no effect on his pitching choice for the opening contest. If the game is played tomorrow as scheduled, Paul (Dizzy) Trout, Virgil Trucks and Art Houtteman, all righthanders, will share the mound work.

Dickey Goes to Hollywood

Pasadena, Calif., March 7 (U.P.).—Veteran Catcher George Dickey today was released outright by the Chicago White Sox to Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League. Dickey batted .223 last year in 83 games."

Pesky a Third Baseman

Sarasota, Fla., March 7 (U.P.).—Manager Joe McCarthy of the Boston Red Sox today ended speculation over who will play third base by announcing that Johnny Pesky will be stationed at the hot corner "from now on." Pesky has played shortstop for the Red Sox since reporting to them in 1942.

'Nubs' Beat 'Dubs'

West Palm Beach, Fla., March 7 (U.P.).—Mickey Rutner, former St. John's University basketball player, got two hits, knocked in the first run and figured in two fancy plays at third base today as the "Nubs" beat the "Dubs," 2 to 0, in the first intra-squad game of the Philadelphia Athletics' spring tarining.

Rookies's Bat Challenges Yost at 3d

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Orlando, Fla., March 7.—All of a sudden the Washington training camp is being spiced with a battle for the third base job, previously believed to be the exclusive domain of Eddie Yost, the smooth fielding rookie of last season.

But into the camp has strode the interesting 6-foot figure of Jay Difani, man of all trades in the infield except first base, and rapping for attention loudly with a big 35-ounce bat.

Young Difani pumped four balls over the scoreboard in left field yesterday, the longest swats in Tinker Field thus far this season, and apparently planted himself solidly into the battle for Yost's job.

Yost's Batting Feeble

The only complaint with Yost has been his .238 batting average of last season, and Manager Joe Kuhel is on the eager side in his search for more batting power. On a club that doesn't boast a single .300 hitter, Difani is in an opportune spot.

They haven't seen him in the field as yet—rain washed out today's workout—but if he is not exactly a shoemaker he may bulk large in the Nats' 1948 plans.

From Augusta of the Sally League, where the Nats got him, come reports that Difani played second base and shortstop well enough, but his best position is third base.

He's a tall, curly-haired lad of French ancestry, who hit .315 last season in B-ball and was the property of Newark when the Nats grabbed him in the draft on the recommendation of Scout Mike Martin.

Speedy Despite His Size

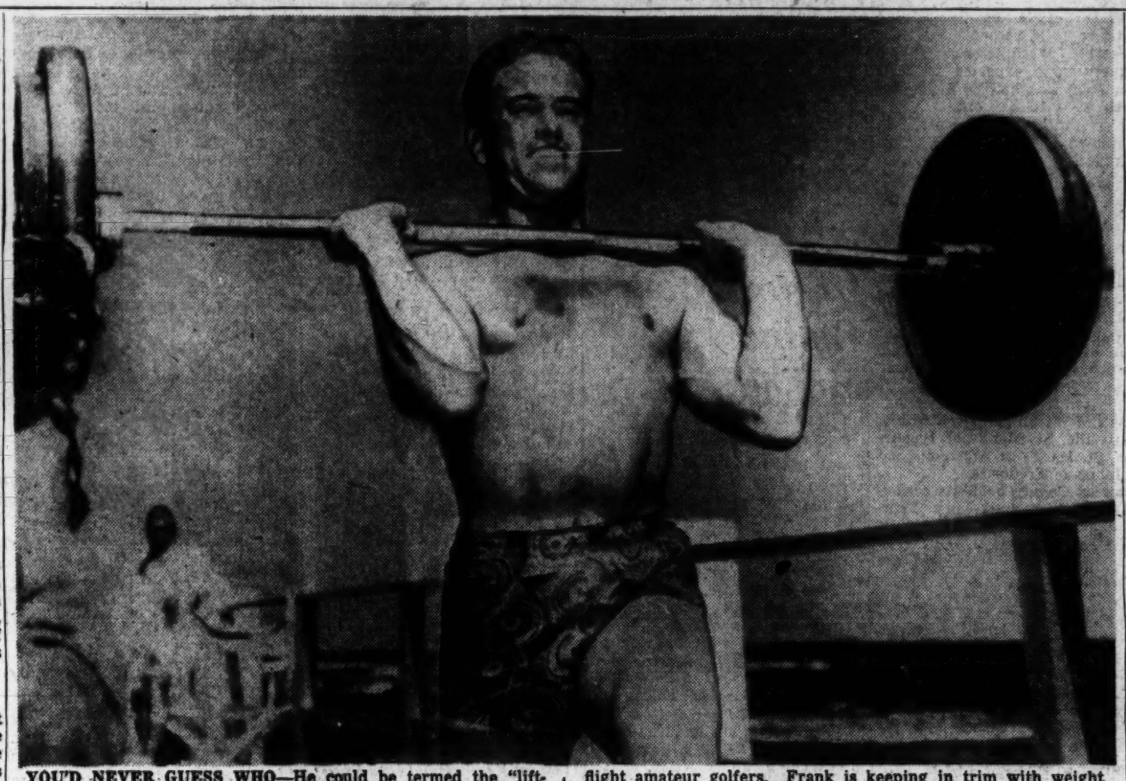
Big as he is, he was second in stolen bases in the Sally League with 39 thefts and that kind of speed fits nicely with the scrambling ball club motif of Joe Kuhel. Difani is not going to outshine Yost defensively unless he suddenly discovers a new fielding genius. Young Yost was tremendously efficient for the Nats afield, and until he encountered a late-season slump he was hitting bear-cat, too. He won't give up easily to Difani or anybody else.

There's a minor battle for the second-base job, too. Al Kozar has been tentatively assigned the job in deference to his .339 average with New Orleans last year, but Eddie Lyons, a second baseman out of the same league, concedes Kozar no advantages.

"For half the season, I had a better record than he did in the Southern," says Lyons who ended up batting .297 for Chattanooga.

Lyons' Fourth Try

Lyons is making his fourth appearence in the Washington training camp and in one sense the experience is novel . . . He isn't the smallest second baseman on the Roster, for once. He's a half inch taller, 4 pounds bigger than young Kozar . . . Today's rain also denied the Nats' bosses a look at Dean Stafford, the giant young Texas outfielder who hit 40 homers in the Big State League last year . . . He's supposed to be a hot article, who can run and field along with his hitting and is the dark horse among the outfield candidates . . . Harold Keller, brother of the Yanks' Charley Keller, who is with the Nats both as a catching and outfield prospect, is a blond edition, physically, of the powerful and brunet Charley.



YOU'D NEVER GUESS WHO—He could be termed the "lifting man" but he's really Frank Stranahan, one of America's top-flight amateur golfers. Frank is keeping in trim with weight lifting while in Boca Raton, Fla., making a movie short on golf

Lions Routed Again, 8 to 3, At Buffalo

Buffalo, Mar. 7.—The Buffalo Bisons handed the Washington Lions an 8-to-3 lacing in their American Hockey League match here tonight.

The teams played on fairly even terms until late in the first period when Buffalo clicked for two goals less than a minute apart. Jerry Brown tallied first on a rebound at 14:14. Tommy Cooper made it 2-0 at 15:06. Washington was unable to capitalize on a penalty to Art Lessard.

Buffalo built up its lead to four goals in the second period before Washington ruined Goalie Connie Dion's bid for a shutout. Tommy Cooper poked in his second goal of the game at 1:58 and Les Hickey got another one less than two minutes later. The Lions capitalized on a penalty to Mike McMahon, Bob Walton scoring at 12:45. Frank Porteous flipped home Bud Foley's at 16.44 to narrow the Bisons' lead to two goals.

Stanky Contracts Pneumonia After He's Traded to Braves

Ciudad Trujillo, Dominican Republic, March 7 (AP).—Eddie Stanky, the second baseman Branch Rickey traded yesterday to the Boston Braves, is recovering from an attack of lobar pneumonia, the hospital here reported today.

Stanky was stricken last night only a few hours after he learned of his trade to Boston for first baseman Ray Sanders, Bama Rowell and a reported $60,000 in cash.

He had worked out Friday but developed chills on Saturday and was rushed to the hospital.

Boston General Manager John Quinn talked over the telephone with Harold Parrott, the Dodgers' traveling secretary, and was told that Stanky was improving steadily after a restless night.

Columbia Named District Two Representative in NCAA Meet

New York, March 6 (U.P.).—Columbia, defeated once in 20 games this season, tonight was named the District 2 representative in the NCAA basketball tournament.

The announcement completed the Eastern bracket, since Kentucky, Holy Cross and Michigan already had been assigned berths for the national semifinals. The Eastern play-off will be held March 19 and 20 at Madison Square Garden.

The Western bracket, however, remained a muddle with play-offs necessary to select three, and perhaps all four teams.

Columbia's 44-to-35 victory over Dartmouth last night, the nineteenth victory for the Lions, apparently clinched the District 2 bid. However, it was almost definite that the team would be invited after New York University accepted a place in the Madison Square Garden Invitational.

Columbia lost only to Princeton this season and avenged that loss this week by downing the Tigers, 76 to 50. The Lions are leading the Ivy League championship race by one game and meet Cornell tomorrow in a game to decide the title.

Elsewhere the situation was not so simple.

In the Rocky Mountain area, Utah muffed its chance to clinch an N.C.A.A. spot by losing to Wyoming last night, 41-37. That threw the two teams into a tie for second place in the conference with Denver.

Brigham Young, the champion, and Denver already have accepted bids to the NAIB tourney which opens at Kansas City tomorrow. So it's up to the NCAA to choose between Utah and Wyoming, with a playoff the probable solution.

Likewise was there a hitch in the Pacific Coast Conference, Oregon State lost to Oregon, 62-444, while Washington beat Idaho twice, 77-37 and 70-45. That put Oregon State and Washington in a tie for the Northern Division title.

They'll play off Tuesday with the winner to met California, the Southern Division champ, in a two-out-of-time series next week end for the Coast [illegible].

Two other playoffs already have been scheduled. Baylor, Southwest Conference champ, meets Arizona, Border Conference winner, this weekend in one.

Oklahoma A. & M., Missouri Valley winner, faces Kansas State, Big Seven champ, in the other next Monday, March 15.

Thus, but I will not be until next week that the N.C.A.A. will know all of its competing teams.

Meanwhile, the go-gun was ready for the Garden Invitational Tournament. Play gets under way Thursday with North Carolina State, NYU, Western Kentucky, Bowling Green, Depaul, Texas, LaSalle and St. Louis U. competing. The draw is scheduled tomorrow.

Game Won 24 Hours After Final Whistle

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 7. A mistake on the part of the timers caused a three-minute overtime period between Martinsburg and Shepherdstown High Schools to be replayed 24 hours after the game had ended with Martinsburg ahead, 23-21.

Shepherdstown officials had complained that the clock was mishandled during the overtime period and W. R. Fugitt, of the State High School Athletic Association, upheld the claim.

The replay of the original overtime period then took place, and Shepherdstown made the most of its second opportunity, winning, 6-4.

Zaslofsky Gets 40 as Stags Tie for Lead

Chicago, March 7 (AP).—The Chicago Stags moved into a tie with the St. Louis Bombers for first place in the Basketball Association of America's Western Division race today when they came from behind to defeat the Providence steamrollers, 89 to 81, before 4,611 fans at Chicago Stadium.

Max Zaslofsky, Stag forward, set a new stadium scoring record when he dropped in 40 points.

He also took the lead in the BBA individual scoring race with a total of 853 points in 41 games. Ed Sadowski, Boston Celtic star, has 852 points in 44 games.

Leading Providence scorer was Kenny Sailors with 19 points.

Phils Make Offer for Nicholson

By Leo H. Petersen

Clearwater, Fla., March 7 (U.P.).—Manager Ben Chapman of the Phillies tonight offered to trade one of his shortstops to the Chicago Cubs for Outfielder Bill Nicholson.

"I have six shortstops who are better than any one the Cubs have and they can have any one of mine except Eddie Miller or Granville Hammer for Nicholson," Chapman said.

"They need a shortstop and I need an outfielder so I'm hoping we can get together on the deal."

Chapman has sought Nicholson ever since he was named manager of the Phillies. If he secures the long-ball hitting left fielder from Chicago, he will shift Roy Cullenbine to first base, giving the club an outfield trio of Nicholson, Harry Walker and Del Ennis.

Has Three Candidates

He has three first base candidates, but is not too high on any of them, although he is hoping that Al Flair, who hit .308 for New Orleans last year, will come through. The others are Howie Schultz, who is a holdout, and Bert Haas. Chapman, however, would rather use Haas at third.

"I'll give up either Harold Albright, Ralph Cabalerro, Ralph Lapointe or Puddinhead Jones for Nicholson," Chapman said. "Any one of them is a lot better than Dick Culler."

At first Chapman included LaPointe, who broke in so promising late last season, hitting .308 in 57 games with the Phillies, but later he changed his mind and said the Cubs could have him if they wanted to give up Nicholson.

Albright hit .232 in 41 games with the Phillies last year, while Caballero hit .287 at Utica and Jones .307 at Terre Haute.

DaGrosa Made Aide at Temple

Philadelphia, March 7 (AP).—Temple University announced today appointment of John (Ox) Da Grosa as first assistant to Head Football Coach Ray Morrison.

Da Grosa resigned after three years as head coach at Holy Cross College. His Crusaders had a winning average of .655 and appeared against the University of Miami in the Orange Bowl in 1946, losing in the final second of play.

The one-time Colgate lineman replaces Josh Cody, who now is supervisor of freshman athletics as well as basketball coach.

Morrison had been mentioned as a possible successor to Howie Odell at Yale University. But he apparently put the final word in on that subject by announcing he hopes to start spring practice at Temple next week.

Barons Win 21st Straight Contest

Cleveland, March 7 (AP).—Cleveland's Barons ran their record undefeated streak to 21 games by defeating the Pittsburgh Hornets 4 to 2 in an American Hockey League game here this afternoon before 12,107.

The victory gave the Barons a clear record over Pittsburgh for the season—four wins and four ties.

Marlboro Wins, 2-1, Over Sugar Booters

Marlboro defeated Sugar Radio, 2-1, to win the second half championship of the Washington and Suburban Soccer League yesterday at Gonzaga Field.

Mondorff's penalty kick in an overtime period decided the game in Marlboro's favor. The two teams will meet in a three-game series to decide the league championship with the opening game taking place at Marlboro Sunday.

Sea Gulls Coach Dies in Baltimore

By The Associated Press

Baltimore, March 7.—Mel Harwood, coach of the Atlantic City Sea Gulls of the Eastern Amateur Hockey League, died at his home here today of a heart attack. He was 40.

He was a native of Pembroke, Ont. He joined the Baltimore team of the Eastern League in 1932, where he was first-string goalie until he quit active play in 1936.

Holy Trinity Loses, 39-38, In CYO Play

Our Lady of Lourdes put on a terrific rally in the last few minutes to defeat Holy Trinitoy, 39-38, in the feature game of the CYO Junior Basketball tournament quarter-finals yesterday at Catholic University.

Trailing by 7 points with three minutes to play Lourdes racked up 9 points while holding the losers to a single tally. Baskets by Pat Haley and Dave Johnson with less than a minute to go tied the score and Bob O'Connor's foul shot clinched the contest just before the final gun.

Outstanding player of the contest, however, was Holy Trinity's Bobby Reese, who pumped in 24 points to keep his team in the running.

In other quarter-final games, St. Gabriel's downed St. Thomas, 32-16, paced by Billy Smith's 14 points; St. Dominic's routed Sacred Heart with Enrico Magnotta scoring 22 for the winners, and St. Martin's trounced St. Joseph's with Allen Knisely and Frank Di Giralamo leading the way for the victors with 16 points apiece.

Orioles in Court To Fight Eviction

Baltimore, March 7 (AP).—The Baltimore Orioles will go to court tomorrow to fight an injunction suit which threatens to make them homeless.

The suit would deny the International Leaguee club use of Municipal Stadium where it has been playing since July, 1944, when the old Oriole Park burned down.

Twenty-eight residents of the stadium area initiated the action. They complain the games, particularly at night, create a nuisance.

Mulvihill Plays On All-East Team

Bob Mulvihill, star of the Fordham University basketball team and a former Gonzaga court ace, has been selected to play on the All-East team which meets a group of West All-Stars later this month at Madison Square Garden, The Washington Post learned last night.

Bob played at Fordham before joining the Marine Corps during the war. He returned to Fordham and is currently in his senior year there. He lives at 1222 Kennedy st. nw.

And Peahead's Puzzled by Own 'T'

Jack George 'Definitely Agrees' to Enroll At Five Southern Conference Colleges

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

DURHAM, N. C., March 7.—Cuff notes from the conference court conclave:

N. C. State now offers a course in "industrial recreation." Those who know say it's a big tougher than the "Technique of the T-Formation," a minor study at a major school nearby . . . With hotel rooms teeming with former All-Americans now coaching in the conference, the most talked about football player here was Jack George of St. John's. No fewer than five schools have him "definitely agreed" to enroll in their institutions of learning, come September . . . Mr. Peahead Walker, eminent professor of football at Wake Forest College, has installed a T-formation for his Deacons which "is so tricky that even I don't know who's carrying the ball" . . . The capacity crowd at Saturday night's N. C. State-Duke game saved its most thunderous ovation for the public address system announcement that Jack Benny was the "Walking Man."

MARYLAND ATHLETIC Director Jim Tatum spent three days here trying to line up football games for 1949. His success was not overwhelming. He not only failed to schedule a game, but also learned that North Carolina plans to drop ais Terps after their October tilt this year . . . Chuck Taylor, basketball's traveling emissary, calls Minneapolis of the National Basketball League the best team in the country . . . Taylor, who probably sees more basketball than anyone in the country, feels that officials are too "whistle happy" and are taking the game away from the players.

WHEN SEPTEMBER 1 rolls around, Ace Parker will experience the distinction of coaching Duke's backfield in the daytime and managing a professional baseball team at night . . . 200 miles apart. Parker will drive from Portsmouth, Va., daily for a week (September 1-7) to tutor the Blue Devil backs in the morning at Durham, only to return to pilot Portsmouth in the evenings . . . When someone asked George McAfee how his toe operation was healing, the Chicago Bear halfback quipped: "Fine, but I guess Coach Halas is worried because I see he signed Lujack and Layhe, just in case." . . . Referee Arnold Heft, who has trouble even getting his name on basketball box scores in the Washington newspapers, got almost as much press space from local papers as the basketball tournament itself . . . The colorful official is quite an attraction down this way.

Our Haight Polishes the Apple Today

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

England's late spring weather proved everything staid villagers had predicted.

Old sluggers—blanketing fog, driving rain and penetrating cold—had had their innings. To bat came light hitters—pleasing sunshine, soothing breezes and softening temperatures. Mother Natur., was sparring for recognition in a war-wedded world, for the year was 1944.

Haight

A clear June night—phooey. More hours to sweat out for the invasion-poised army. "All the better to bomb you with, my dear," snarled Grandma Nazi Wolf across the Channel.

On such a night, it was, that a trim-waisted, weather-tanned young man sat down on the edge of his bunk. He didn't bother to unlace his high-top, rubber-soled shoes—the stamp of a paratrooper. He almost pulled off his feet with them. The fellow was angry.

"I'd like to wring somebody's neck for this," he growled. "The big show coming up and I'm supposed to stay in England. Boot training—never missed a minute. Jump school—didn't I make it when other fellows had to drop out? My buddies—they get to go. Wait until I get back to the States, I'll fix somebody for this."

He thought a while, finally pressed his lips tight and mumbled, "Could work, at that."

It did.

He was aboard one of the first planes to take off for Normandy—and perhaps eternity. But in England, with orders to "stay there," was a married man with three children back home.

Among the wounded shuttled back across the Channel was the trim-waisted, weather-tanned fellow. A shot through the arm lodged in his hand. Stilled fingers hung from the sling.

Might be able to use them—time would tell.

Well, perhaps he can't use all his fingers and, on a cold day like last Saturday, his arm probably was a bit stiff. However, former Paratrooper B. Beverley Byrd was shipshape enough to ride his Sun Wonder some 5 miles over rugged, soggy terrain, punctuated by streams, fences and copes, to win the coveted Redland Bowl.

This was the second major victory, shared with his horse, since he took up hunt-riding less than two years ago. His first was the all-important Piedmont Cup last season.

I had to phone in my story on the Redland races and was late arriving at the buffet supper. The 27-year-old bachelor was an island—completely surrounded by beautiful girls.

I couldn't get close enough for an interview, so I nosed around elsewhere for some of the answers to a rumor that he had "a fine war record."

When I get to Charles Town, I'll have to keep my eyes open, because if I don't see him first I'm likely to get them closed without effort on my part, if you know what I mean. In other words, he's going to "no like" his story.

Bev. Byrd is the son of Senator Harry Byrd of Virginia and took up hunting because he could pursue his hobby and still manage the vast apple orchards of his ancestral home, "Rosemont," at Berryville, Va.

And by the way, when Bev Byrd parachuted into Normandy that june morning, I'm told he landed, of all places, in an apple orchard!

Games Begin On Thursday At Norfolk

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

With most of Washington scholastic basketball activity near an end, attention focuses this week on the Virginia State tournament that begins Thursday and ends Saturday at the Civic Auditorium in Norfolk.

Two of the top teams in northern Virginia are entered, and one of them, George Washington of Alexandria is conceded a good chance of winning the championship.

The other nearby entry, Washington-Lee of Arlington, was runner-up to G. W. in the Northern Virginia League, but compiled a mediocre 10-10 record.

George Washington's stiffest competition is expected to come from John Marshall of Richmond, which has a 16-4 record.

G. W., with a 17-4 record, was eliminated in the semifinals of the Metropolitan Washington tournament by Central last Friday night.

In its quarterfinal test, George Washington faces Lynchburg in the first game of a night double-header. Washington-Lee bumps up against John Marshall in the first game of a day twin bill.

Semifinals are Friday night, and finals Saturday night.

Also prominent on the week's agenda is the Prority school's invitatonal tournament which commences Friday. Competing are host Priority, St. Paul's and St. Anthony's of Washington, DeMatha of Hyattsville, St. Mary's of Hagerstown, St. Mary's of Annapolis and St. John's of Frederick.

Fairfax County holds its basketball tournament today and tomorrow at Fairfax High School. Fairfax, Mount Vernon, Herndon and Falls Church are entered, with games slated in both boys' and girls' divisions. Games will be played at 3:30, 4:30, 7:30 and 8:30 p. m.

MONDAY

Maryland District II boys tournament. Class C, Richard Montgomery at Mount Rainier, 3:30 p. m.; Class D, Gwynn Park vs. Damascus at Richard Montgomery, 8 p. m.

Their Craft Missing

30 Planes, Fleet of Boats Search for Jockey, 2 Others

Miami, Fla., March 7 .—Thirty planes and a fleet of boats and trucks searched the Florida Keys today for Jockey Albert Snider and two others missing since Friday aboard a small boat.

The boat, also carrying Don Frazier of Toronto, Canada, and C. H. Trtier of Miami, disappeared in a storm with winds that reached 48 mile velocity.

The Coast Guard said Navy and civilian planes had joined its own aircraft in the search while boats scoured waterways and trucks took serching parties to isolated points.

Ken Stribling Faces Brown Here Tonight

Hard punching Ken Stribling hopes to add another victim to his growing list when he faces New York's Randy Brown in the feature 10-rounder tonight at Turner's Arena.

With 13 victories in 16 starts over the past three years, Stribling has projected himself to the top of the local middleweight heap.

If he gets by Brown and several other opponents this spring, a fight with Laverne Roach this summer at the ball park is in the making.

Possessing the hardest right hand punch in the area, Stribling should keep his 1948 victory string intact against Brown. The New York fighter downed Art Bethea here a few weeks ago in his third bout this year. In the others he beat Danny Martin and lost to Burl Charity.

Stribling defeated Frank Lacey, Johnny Walker and Kid Wolfe in recent bouts and has knockout triumphs over Joe Gannon, Frank Sweeney and Georgie Williams to his credit.

In the preliminaries Johnny Hansbury and Jerome Pratt meet in a five; Kid Willie faces Bobby Suma in a four and Kid Ferris fights Mose Herald in another. Two more four rounders will be added to the card which starts at 8:45 p. m.

The Records:

Brown (1947): Decisioned by Elton Evans in 6; decisioned by Steve Belloise in 8; decisioned Ellis Stewart in 6; decisioned Jimmy Moore in 6; decisioned Jerry Fiorello in 10; decisioned by Bill Poli in 8; KO'd Kenny Harris in 1; decisioned by Kenny Harris in 6.

Conference Wrestling Opens Today

Lexington, Va., March 7 (AP).—Washington and Lee's Generals are heavy favorites to win the Southern Conference wrestling crown.

The championship will be decided in a two-day tournament in the Generals' own gymnasium here tomorrow and Tuesday.

Ten Southern Conference member schools will compete during the two days. Seven full teams and individual representations from three other league schools will be around for the fireworks.

Full teams will come from the University of North Carolina, Virginia Military Institute, Virginia Tech, Davidson, Maryland, North Carolina State and the host school, Washington and Lee. In addition, individual performers will participate from three schools which sponsor no wrestling teams. These schools are George Washington, The Citadel and Wake Forest.

After Monday afternoon's preliminary and quarterfinals matches, the meet will swing into the semifinals Monday night. Losing grapplers will scrap for consolation honors Tuesday afternoon to determine contestants for third-place competition Tuesday night. The finals in all weight divisions also are scheduled Tuesday night.

Quantico Favored In Service Boxing

Quantico, Va., March 6.—Quantico Marine boxers are rated heavy favorites to capture the team championship in the finals of the Middle Eastern Service Conference tournament here today.

The Marines will have entrants in all eight divisions since the Quantico team has swept all its preliminary bouts. Best bets for the Marines are Keith King, heavyweight, and Frankie Stellato, 126-pounder, both former Golden Gloves champs.

Georgetown Wants Games

Washington Fencers Win

The Washington Fencers Club defeated Baltimore yesterday at Pierce Hall, 14-13. It was a three-weapon match with the Washington team winning in the foil, 6-3, and Epee matches, 5-4, but also losing in the sabre, 6-3.

NAIB Opens Today With Eight Games

Kansas City, March 7 (AP).—The basketball tournament that annually makes a bum of the expert handicappers, the National Intercollegiate (NAIB), opens tomorrow and its a good bet that the team with the stamina will win the crown.

Eight games are scheduled for Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday; four night games Thursday, an i two night games Friday and Saturday.

Emils S. Liston, executive secretary of NAIB, who "dreamed up" and managed the first National Intercollegiate in 1938—an eight-team field—declares the 32 teams in the tenth tournament will surpass any cage show ever held in this country.

One reason for the presence of so many outstanding teams this year is the NAIB tie-in with the Olypmic playoffs scheduled for New York City, March 27, 29 and 31.

Loyola, Marshall Qualify

The winner here will get one of the eight spots in the New York tournament that will determine the United States' representative in the world games in London next summer.

The field was completed last night in district playoffs at Fort Worth, Tex., and Baltimore, Md. Texas Wesleyan won the right to represent that State in beating Texas Tech, 54-52.

Loyola of Baltimore qualified by virtue of its victory over American University, 49-43.

The championship stretch is five victories in six days, which puts a premium on physical equipment and team stamina.

Marshall College of Huntington, W. Va., had the steam and skill to win the title last year and will be back to defend its laurels. No team has won two crowns in the meet.

Most prominent among the "name teams" are Brigham Young University, champion of the Skyline Six (former Big Seven); Louisville (Ky.) University, Denver University, one of the few teams to beat Notre Dame this winter; Manhattan College of New York, Texas Wesleyan, San Jose (Calif.) State, and Marshall.

Among the teams that appear capable of making the experts appear silly are Northeast Missouri State Teachers of Kirksville (29-1), Peru (Nebr.) Teachers (19-1), Beloit (Wis.) College (20-2), Minnesota State Teachers of Mankato, Hamline, Gonzaga and Texas Wesleyan.

Montana University and Connecticut Teachers of New Britain, two of the dark horses, will open the firing at 12 o'clock noon (CST).

Central Places Three Players on All-High Squad

The All-High basketball squad, which meets the App-Prep team March 20 at Uline Arena in a Big Brothers Club benefit game, was named yesterday.

Ten players comprise the squad, with Central placing three men, Hal Sponsler, Jim Pantos and Bob Johnson. Two Roosevelt men, Bill Hibbs and Billy Paugh, and Wayne Brizendine, Western; Wally Warner, Anacostia; Jack Whitcomb, Wilson; John Brown, Eastern and Buddy Wickers, Tech, complete the All-High roster.

The Prep All-Stars will be announced tomorrow.

Coaches for the High team are Gabe Ferrazzi, Central and Julian Colangelo, Coolidge. First practice session for the team will be held Wednesday at 3:30 p. m. in the Central gym.

Proceeds from the benefit contest will go to the Boys Club of Washington work fund.

2 N. C. State Men Make All-Star Team

Durham, N. C., March 7 (AP).—North Carolina State's Southern Conference basketball champions dominated the all-tournament team selected by writers who attended the event which ended here yesterday.

Ed Bartels and Capt. Leo Katkaveck, the regular guards for the Wolfpack, won all-star votes on ballots of 29 writers. Voting was on a two points for a first team vote and one for a second team basis under sponsorship of the newly formed Southern Conference Sports Writers Association.

The other three positions were split among as many teams. Corren (Ceep) Youmans, whose 63 points in 4 games for Duke led all tournament scorers, won a forward berth along with Capt. Bob Paxton, North Carolina's rebound artist. The other first-team post went to Jere Bunting, sophomore guard standout of the William and Mary team. Bartels was placed at center on the star team.

The second team saw three of five posts won by State players. Warren Cartier won a guard position, Paul Horvath was chosen for center and Dick Dickey, whose tournament career was cut to one game when mumps intervened, was named for forward. The other forward was Davidson's George (Buddy) Cheek, with Tommy Hughes of Duke taking the other guard post.

Locke, Mangrum Tied Again in 4-Ball Play

Miami, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Bobby Locke, Johannesburg, South Africa, and Lloyd Mangrum of Chicago went into their second extra-hole match in the $10,000 Miami International four-ball Golf Tournament today.

Locke and Mangrum, who eliminated Sam Byrd of Detroit and Johnny Revolta of Evanston, Ill., after 44 holes of play, were deadlocked after 36 holes with Jim Ferrier of San Francisco and Cary Middlecoff of Memphis, Tenn., when darkness overtook them.

The Locke-Mangrum duo and the Ferrier-Middlecoff team each had 63s in the morning round for the lowest 18-hole score of the tournament. Neither team held more than a 1-up advantage at any point.

Locke won the twentteth, but Ferrier evened matters on the twenty-third when Locke parred the thirty-fifth to tie it up again.

They played the thirty-sixth in regulation figures as darkness closed in. Play will resume tomorrow.

Herman Keiser, Akron, Ohio, and Johnny Palmer, Badin, N. C., rallied to eliminate De Vicenzo and Enrique Bertolino, both of Argentina, 1-up, in the second round.

Dick Metz, Arkansas City, Kans., and Skip Alexander, Southern Pines, N. C., defeated Tony Penna of Cincinnati and Claude Harmon, Mamaroneck, N. Y., 1-up in 38 holes where Metz sank a 15-foot putt for a birdie on the 370-yard par four hole.

Ellsworth Vines, Los Angeles, and Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., turned back Jimmy Demaret, Ojai, Calif., and Jack Burke, jr., Houston, Tex., 5 and 4. Burke replaced Ben Hogan, Hershey, Pa., who was forced to withdraw after recurrence of a back ailment.

Smith Beats Riegel, Wins Gainesville

Gainesville, Fla., March 7 (AP).—Al Smith of Winston-Salem, N. C. won first prize money of $500 in the Gainesville Open Golf tournament there today.

Smith and National Amateur Champion Skee Riegel of Los Angeles tied with 209 for the 54-hole event and Smith won a sudden death playoff on the second extra hole.

Jim Milward of Three Lakes, Wis., was fourth with 211 and three pros tied for fifth with 212. They were Pete Cooper of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., Otto Greiner of Baltimore and Eric Monti of Santa Monica, Calif.

ALEXANDER HAMILTON

By Hamilton's "Stroke-of-Genius" Plan . . .

We can avert a world crash . . and stop Stalin — NOW

Read Why ERP, though essential, is not enough . . . why Freedom & Union proposes that we apply Alexander Hamilton's federalist and financial principles now to form a Transatlantic Federal Union of the Democracies, save Europe's vanishing savings, harness them through free enterprise to recovery and peace, spread the prosperity that ruins communist infiltration . . . before it triumphs west of Czechoslovakia.

WHILE STALIN takes over Czechoslovakia, and we talk of stopping him there by speeding the European Recovery Plan, western Europe's private capital is going down the drain in billions bigger than those we plan to give. Example: On February 13 the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted $5.3 billion to finance the European Recovery Plan for the coming year. But already, on January 25, France had had to devalue the franc to a degree that wiped out more than $5.5 billion of the savings of French citizens IN ONE FORM ALONE—in their national bonds—to say nothing of their loss in savings deposits and insurance.

The great bulk of the private capital left in Europe is owned by Britons. They have so far suffered only a 20 per cent loss in the dollar value of their currency and bonds. British private investors now have more than $61 billion in capital invested in British national bonds alone. If their government should have to devalue as much as France did, it would wipe out more than $30 billion of the private savings now in British bonds. Down the drain would go nearly twice as much private capital as the Marshall Plan proposes to give all Europe in the next four years put together.

We forget that every country's national debt is really a debt it owes to the citizens who put their savings in its bonds. When a government devalues its currency by half, it wipes out half the savings that these enterprising, thrifty, patriotic citizens confided to it to care for their old age or their children's education, or to realize one day a dream of going into business for themselves, being their own boss, "being free." We forget this, and these other commonsense truths:

A) Private capital is essential for private enterprise.

B) The more private capital is wiped out, the more the losers are likely to follow Moscow's propaganda.

C) The more we preserve the savings of the Middle Class, the less danger there is of any kind of dictatorship. The Marxists have always singled out as their chief adversary the Middle Class, the bourgeoisie,—the stablest pillar of individual freedom in every country.

"Galloping Collapse" Threatens British

Remember how Italy and Germany turned to Mussolini and Hitler when inflation wiped out the savings of their Middle Class. Consider how communism and talk of dictatorship has risen in France since inflation began turning the French bourgeoisie into the proletariat.

The Marshall Plan is not enough to save even the savings of the British. As Walter Lippmann said February 17:

"The best that the Marshall Plan can do is to mitigate the crisis—to enable the British to manage an orderly reorganization out of bankruptcy. Even with full Marshall aid . . . the great liquidation cannot be averted. It can only be managed in such a way as to prevent the catastrophe of mass unemployment and hunger in the British Isles and a galloping collapse of the British commitments in the outer world. Even to do that will require sacrifice, discipline, and political audacity on a scale and in a degree which no free people in all history has ever had to show . . .

"The British crisis will have far-reaching effects throughout the world, and many drastic and unprecedented measures, that cannot now be clearly foreseen, will have to be taken to control these effects. We must not harbor the illusion that when we have adopted the Marshall Plan, European recovery will follow."

Nor is European Union enough to do the job. Some leaders say that nothing can now prevent British bankruptcy. They are already pondering "the drastic and unprecedented measures" that will be needed after it occurs . . . to save our economy from depression, and Europe from Stalin. We face even graver peril in Britain than in Italy, France.

If you prefer to take your drastic measures before the crash comes, there is still a way to prevent it. Not so drastic as post mortem measures will be, it involves no such sacrifice for you. Nor is it another wild stab in the dark—it is not unprecedented but time-tested.

To prevent further disaster now—and enjoy greater prosperity than we have ever known—we need only to follow the way by which Alexander Hamilton's genius saved the capital of the people when bankruptcy threatened the 13 States.

The fascinating story of how Hamilton did this—and how we can do even better today—is told in Freedom & Union in an article, "We Need Hamilton's Plan Now," by John Howard Ford, son of Hamilton's biographer, and Clarence K. Streit, author of Union Now.

They point out that the War of Independence left the 13 States not only facing bankruptcy but a worse situation in some respects than the democracies face now, following World War II. Each State then had its own currency, tariff, army. They cooperated through a "League of Friendship," as ineffective as the United Nations. They suffered from high prices, shortages, inflation, worthless currencies, and worthless war bonds. There was rioting, some were threatening war on each other.

As with the democracies today, some States—those that had suffered most from invasion—were worse off than others. Massachusetts, where Shays's Rebellion broke out, had a public debt five times greater per capita than Pennsylvania's. Unlike the democracies now, none of the States then had any gold in its treasury.

Hamilton led in urging the 13 to unite under a Federal Government as their only salvation. "His was a lonesome oracle in those primordial days," as Senator Vandenberg says in his book, The Greatest American: Alexander Hamilton. But by 1789 the 13 had scrapped their league for our present Federal Union. Hamilton was made its first Secretary of the Treasury. He found the Treasury empty, without credit.

Within a year, the new Federal Union could borrow in Holland and Belgium at the lowest rates Europe offered. Within a year, the worthless bonds of the various States were worth their full value. Stagnation had become enterprise. The American standard of living had begun its fabulous ascent.

*At official exchange rates, this total would be $431,620,000,000—only 3% more. The "parity" rate is one that official studies indicate would be a fairer rate than the official one.

Note—The percent of internal public debt owned by private investors in the leading countries is: U. K., 64; Canada, 66; France, 62; U. S., 47. This does not include the large amount of the debt—32% in the U. S.—that is owned by commercial banks.

How the Hamilton Plan Saves Private Capital

How did Hamilton work this wonder? The Freedom & Union article boils the "Hamilton Plan" down to this:

"Unite democracies by federal union and have the Union not only replace their currencies with its currency but assume each democracy's public debt."

Once the 13 had secured the great economies and advantages of federal union, Hamilton boldly proposed that the new Union take over and pay at full value the public debt of every State in it. The Congressmen and Senators from the States that had suffered least in the war "hit the ceiling" at this proposal, but it was finally adopted, 32 to 29.

By having the Union make good these debts, Hamilton not only restored the public credit, but in so doing he restored all the private capital that was invested in the public debt. Instead of devaluing and making more loans to the State governments in our modern manner, Hamilton by "this final stroke of genius," as Ford and Streit point out, put money back in the pockets of the citizens, spread among them the private capital needed for private enterprise.

Suppose we Americans tried this Hamilton Plan now, as the Freedom & Union article proposes we do. Suppose we united with the British and the European democracies in a greater Federal Union, which replaced the dollar, pound, franc, with a Union currency backed by the combined gold reserves of the democracies ($28 billion). Suppose the new Union took over our national debt and that of all the others, and that we and the British, Canadians, French, etc., paid to the Union the taxes we now pay to our national governments to make good the debt.

What would it cost you? Look at the accompanying table, Column 4, and you will see that your share of the debt load of this great Transatlantic Union would be $1,449—or $404 less than the $1,853 per capita share in the debt burden of the U. S. The same table shows, in Column 5, that the U. S. would need 1.45 years to pay off its national debt if it used all its national income for this purpose. The new Union would need 1.65 years—only about two months more—to pay off the combined debt of the democracies with their combined income.

The debt service would be spread over the whole Union; the taxpayers in the U. S., Britain, France, Canada, etc., would simply pay the Union the taxes they now pay their national governments for this purpose. And never was so much offered so many for so little. The cost, indeed, would be more than offset by the great economies that Union would permit on arms, while greatly increasing our armed power.

It would check the cost of living by ending inflationary pressures, shortages an' waste inherent in national sovereignty. Where ERP aids governments, the Hamilton Plan directly aids the citizens, puts hard money in the pockets of European workers, farmers, businessmen, ends their haunting fear of losing the rest of their savings by devaluation. If that won't put communism on the run, nothing will.

Think of all that could be done by saving—as only the Hamilton Plan does—those $61 billion in British bonds and all the rest of the private capital left in Europe. Think of harnessing all that power through free enterprise to recovery. Once the British, French, Dutch, Canadian, and other bonds were converted into Union bonds, think,—the Englishmen, Scots, Irish, Frenchmen, other good men and women who own them could get goods or credit with them in New York, Zurich, anywhere in the Union, just as a Missourian or Californian can get goods or credit with his U. S. bonds anywhere in the American Union.

Thus by the Hamilton Plan we can restore to the citizen the value and free use of his own private capital that he loaned his Government for freedom's sake—instead of letting it be wiped out, and then loaning his Government billions to dole out . . . to undercover communists. Thus we save western Europe's governments from being trapped as Benes has been. Thus we restore the foundation of free enterprise, avert the looming world economic crash, prevent the coming war, cut the ground from under Stalin, bring undreamed of prosperity, peace, freedom. If you have any doubts, take advantage of the coupon below to get, free a 16-page reprint of the full Freedom & Union article. But remember:

If you wait to act until inflation and devaluation wipe out the rest of Europe's savings, the U. S. can then, at best, only dole out aid to an embittered proletariat. Your delay helps destroy the golden opportunity that Hamilton's stroke of genius gives us today.

PROGRAM FOR ACTION

Alone, the present European Recovery Plan, though essential, is no cure. Combined with the Hamilton Plan, it serves the purpose of first aid, in this program that Owen J. Roberts, former U. S. Supreme Court Justice, recently urged on the United States:

1. Convoke immediately a federal convention of the democracies to work out a plan to achieve recovery and peace by federating them in a Transatlantic Union.
2. Extend aid to Western Europe for the coming year as provided for in ERP.

Thus combined, ERP gains the time needed for the democracies to put Hamilton's Plan in effect. Once in effect, the Hamilton Plan pays its own way, soon saves us taxes. Indeed, by the great hope it inspires it begins paying dividends in faster European production and firm resistance to communism . . . from the very day that we call that Federal Convention. In the oxcart 18th century, the original Hamilton Plan was put in effect hardly more than two years after the Convention met to draft our Constitution. We can move as fast today, achieve as great results.

To lead the free to this new, "more perfect Union," is our natural destiny. Don't make your children lament that you slept through this momentous time. Help make history now!

What Tribute Have You Paid HAMILTON?

"Ten thousand pages would be required to fill in the full story of his genius."—Senator Vandenberg.

"There was no public credit. Hamilton created it . . . gave courage to the people."
—Henry Cabot Lodge.

"It is impossible to find in all history any other statesman who accomplished so much with such small means, and who received so slight a reward for his services."—Henry Jones Ford.

"He is so renowned he needs no eulogy. His merits can hardly be over-stated . . . Macmaster and Holst unite in saying that he was the foremost genius among the public men in the new world."—Lord Acton, History of Freedom.

You may not be so eloquent—but your money talks. How often have you had Hamilton's picture in your hand—on a $10 bill—and how often have you given one of those bills to show your gratitude for all that each of us owes this founder of our prosperity? Why not give at least one of these $10 bills now—to pay tribute to the man who made your money "sound as the dollar"—and to help save Freedom now by applying again his federalist and financial plan? Don't neglect him longer! Use this coupon now!

Inquests Set In Slaying of Cab Drivers

Coroner's Jury Will Sit Today In Two Murders; 2 Brothers Held

Defendants in the action are Lawrence J. Garner, 23, of 2131 L st. nw. and George A. Garner, 25, of 28½ Hanover st. nw. They are brothers and are charged with first-degree murder.

The men they allegedly shot down in cold blood are James Hardy, 23, of 647 G st. ne. and Howard Jones, 37, of 417 Irving st. nw. The brothers signed confessions, police said, after their arrests.

Hardy, mortally wounded, and the body of Jones were found within half a block of each other in a desolate section of Southeast Washington. They had been beaten with fists, slugged by bottle and gun butts, and then shot. Hardy died the next day.

A coroner's jury will decide in each case whether, in its opinion, the defendants were responsible for the deaths. Meanwhile, the defendants are being held without bond at District Jail pending the action of the coroner.

Cab Driver Questioned In Meyrovitch Slaying

Police disclosed yesterday they had questioned a cab-driver witness in the slaying of Meyer Meyrovitch, 39, who was shot to death last Monday night in his grocery store at 90 O st. nw.

He twas the same driver, police admitted, who told a woman passenger after the murder that two weeks earlier he had overheard a man threaten to kill the storekeeper.

Lieut. Jeremiah F. Flaherty, head of the homicide squad, said the driver did not give them any information they did not have already.

There was one important factor that could not be overlooked: Meyrovitch when found had more than $1500 cash in his pockets and $40 in change was in the store cash register.

Police were still trying to find several school girls who are reported to have seen a man run from Meyrovitch's store at about the time of the killing.

Capt. Robert S. Bryant, acting chief of detectives, said ballistics tests have been completed on the bullet taken from the grocer's body. He did not disclose the caliber of the slug.

Meanwhile, members of a special squad assigned to concentrate on unsolved murders, and members of the homicide and robbery squads met at headquarters yesterday for a discussion of the case.

Girl Stabs Cab Driver When She Is Ejected

Innocent victim of a stabbing was Joseph P. Moore of 487 F st. sw., a cab driver. He said he picked up two sailors and a girl in his cab, an argument developed and he ordered the passengers out of his cab. When the girl alighted, he said, he was stabbed by her in the right forearm.

Miss Regina Hill, 18, of 1618 7th st. nw., was struck under the left eye with a brick by an assailant whom she named, but who has not been arrested, according to police.

The water glass was applied with full force to the face of Albert Boyden, 21, of 1330 Vermont ave., police said. Boyden suffered numerous lacerations, police said.

Rogers Heights Housewife Held Suicide

Respirator Kept Mrs. Hatcher, 31, Alive Six Hours

Police said Mrs. Hatcher stopped breathing at 7:20 p. m. Saturday, but was kept alive until 1:20 a. m. by use of the resuscitator. A 22-calibger bullet which entered her brain severed the respiratory cord which influences breathing.

The suicide verdict was issued after an investigatoin by Dr. James I. Boyd, Prince Georges County medical examiner, and County Detectives Richard Pearson and Earl J. Huber.

Mrs. Hatcher, a housewife, was found by her father, Albert B. Hunter, 60, Capital Transit Co. employe. Her 4-year-old daughter, Carlyn, was crying in an adjoining living room when Hunter arrived home. Carl Hatcher, 31, the woman's husband, arrived later, after she had been removed to the hospital.

Funeral services will be held Wednesday at 10 a. m. at the W. W. Chambers funeral home, Riverdale, Md. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery.

GW Instructor Gets Scholarship Worth $25,000

Dr. Edward J. Beattie, jr., clinical instructor in surgery at the George Washington School of Medicine, has received a five-year scholarship from the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation, New York.

Dr. Beattie, native of Philadelphia, was graduated from Princeton in 1939, and received his doctor of medicine degree from the Harvard Medical School in 1943. From 1943 to 1945 he was an assistant in surgery, and from 1945 to 1947 a resident surgeon and junior associate in surgery at the Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston.

Steam Scalds In Pit Fatal To Boy of 5

Victim of Accident At Kaywood Gardens Dies in Hospital

Joseph

The child, son of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Brennan, 2702 Webster st., Mount Rainier, died at Prince Georges General Hospital at Cheverly shortly after 1 a. m.

Lieut. Ralph D. Fritz, USGGG, 4308 Kaywood Gardens, who pulled the boy from the pit, said yesterday he saw three children jumping on doors which had been placed across the opening. When they disappeared, he became alarmed and ran to the spot.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a. m. Wednesday at the William J. Nalley funeral home, Rhode Island and Eastern aves. ne. Burial will be in Fort Lincoln Cemetery.

Another Vatican Officer Ousted in Financial Swindle

Vatican City, March 7 (NYHT). An authoritative Vatican source disclosed today that Monsignor Giulio Guidetti, one of the chief directors of funds of the Catholic Church, has been removed from office in connection with the financial swindles committed by another former Vatican monsignor, Edoardo Prettner Cippico.

The source said Monsignor Guidetti had been confined in his quarters pending investigation. He added, however, the "general feeling" in the Vatican is that Monsignor Guidetti was innocently "taken in by forged documents" presented to him by Cippico.

GSI Parley Deadlocks, Picketing Is Renewed

Management Asks Modifications to Agreement Which Union Had Accepted

Renewed picketing of GSI-operated cafeterias was announced last night as union and management remained deadlocked after stumbling over modifications in a proposed over-all agreement.

Oliver T. Palmer, chief negotiator and business agent of CIO United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers Local 471, told members at a meeting yesterday "the strike is still on," since Government Services, Inc., has not accepted in to the agreement proffered by Conciliator George E. Strong.

The union accepted Strong's proposal for settlement of the strike in to, as required, but GSI sought modifications involving arbitration procedures.

GSI would have arbitrators of the American Arbitration Association make final decisions in grievance cases, rather than Strong, as the conciliator proposed.

Outline of Proposal

Strong's proposal would provide that cafeteria workers who were on the payroll prior to the strike are to be returned to work "as speedily as possible, consistent with efficient operation of the cafeterias." The employes would return with full seniority, and without discrimination between workers on the rolls December 31, 1947, and those employed since that date, provided they report for work within three working days after being notified.

All picket lines would be withdrawn immediately, the proposal stated, and GSI would resume operation of all units open last December. Grievances would be handled as in the past, except that emloyes would have the right of union representation and other rights. Final step in the grievance procedure would be up to Strong. Existing wage scales would continue through 1948 and there would be a check-off of union dues.

Defense Unit Of Red Cross Will Report

National defense officials will report their collections in the American Red Cross campaign tomorrow at the third luncheon meeting of the drive, which enters its second week with 14.2 per cent of its $1,080,000 Washington area goal achieved.

Secretary of the Treasury John W. Snyder, chairman of the Government division for the campaign, is scheduled to be the speaker at the report meeting, which will be held at 12:30 p. m. in the United States Chamber of Commerce building, 1615 H st. nw.

Meanwhile, Rudolph M. Evans, chairman of the Red Cross volunteer blood donation drive, said the early response has been sufficient to meet an early quota of 200 donors a week.

At present, the blood being collected is being used to meet the total needs of the Mount Alto Veterans' Hospital, the Naval Hospital at Bethesda, in cooperation with the Montgomery County Red Cross Chapter, Children's Hospital, George Washington, Georgetown, Episcopal, Glendale, Adams and Burwell Hospitals.

The local drive for funds is part of a 75-million-dollar national campaign. Some 38 million dollars is earmarked to meet the financial requirements of the national organization, with 28 per cent of the sum to be used for the armed forces.

Thirteen per cent will aid veterans, according to Frederick A. Winfrey, vice president of the National Red Cross, 10 per cent will be for disaster relief, 22 per cent for assistance to the volunteer chapters, 2 per cent for international activities, 7 per cent for general administrative expenses and 4 per cent for contingencies.

Crop 'Copter Has Range of 0 to 93 mph

By Charles Yarbough
Post Reporter

The plexiglass bubble with a man in it eased to a stop six fcet in the air.

It is an altitude particularly adapted to interception of badminton birds, trolling for rockfish or merely shaking hands with a tall, boring friend whose jokes you've heard.

But Pilot Rowland (Red Roelofs was only demonstarting the hovering qualities of the first area-based commerical helicopter, which can fly as slow as a halt and 93 miles an hour faster.

Hummingbird Only Rival

The aircraft, truly a plexiglass bubble under a windmill, is Bell Aircraft's $25,000 47-D. It nestled to the ground at the Erco Field at Riverdale, Md., yesterday like a setting hen on eggs.

Roelofs, 35, of 4411 Sheridan ave., Hyattsville, Md., didn't glide in it. He brought it straight down in an area less than 50 feet wide, its main rotor blades "whup-whup-whup" as they whirled.

Purchased by the new Roto-Wing Air Service, Inc., with J. Robert Fischel at its head, the helicopter is scheduled for wide duty, but intended largely for agriculture—flat crop dusting, beetle chasing, or what IS wrong with your crops?

Plans Flight Training

Fischel, 32-year-old former Air Forces ground officer, of 6 W. Underwood st., Chevy Chase, Md., plans flight training and charter projects.

Powered with a 178-norsepower Franklin engine, it has 36-foot rotor blades. Auto-rotation will bring it down gently with a dead engine. One has been landed with one rotor blade off.

The pilot and one passenger sit in the plexiglass bubble, the deck immediately under their feet and the back of the seat the only blind spots.

Roelofs hovered over the landing spot, 30 feet up; flew it backward a few feet, then five feet to each side.

"I just want to be sure no one is standing under there," he grinned.

NO STONES, PLEASE—Reporter Yarbrough (hatless) and Pilot Roelofs in the "glass house" of the "Roto-Wing," 6 feet off the ground at Erco Field

Teachers Must 'Build for Peace,' Speaker Asserts

A teacher—whether kindergarten or college—must "build for peace," 90 prospective teachers were told last night at Washington Missionary College, Takoma Park, Md.

Dr. Mildred Sandison Fenner of Takoma Park, associate editor of the National Education Association Journal, added that the true reward of teaching is not the pay check.

Instead, she told the students at the Seventh-day Adventist college, the rewards come 25 years later when former students are "winning success in the world."

The Federal Diary

Final Installment of Booklet Explaining Retirement Act

The Washington Post today presents the fourth and final installment of the Civil Service booklet that explains the recently enacted Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Retirement Act.

The Civil Service Commission has been unable to meet the tremendous demand for its "best-selling" booklet. This newspaper is publishing its text in full as a service to Federal workers who may be disappointed in their search for a copy of it.

The popular booklet was written by Lyman L. Woodman, a member of the Civil Service Commission information staff, with the help of Warren Irons, chief of the Retirement Division.

Many Federal workers are clipping this and the three previous installments and making their own booklets. They will use them to solve their retirement problems.

Part IV

Retirement Booklet

If he does not leave a widow or children, his beneficiary will receive, in the form of a lump-sum payment, everything in the Fund to the employe's credit, with interest, regardless of how long the worker was employed.

If the deceased person leaves a survivor entitled to an immediate annuity, or a future annuity at age 50, the question of a lump-sum payment of an unexpended balance cannot arise until we see, after all survivorship payments are made, whether anything remains in the fund.

If the employe dies leaving a widow or other survivor, or both, entitled to any benefit, there will not be a lump-sum payment due anyone if the annuities which are paid wipe out the total credited to the deceased worker. If, however, there is any balance left because the survivors' payments cease—on account of remarriage or death, for instance—that unexpended balance will go to the beneficiary or the estate.

It could happen that a survivorship benefit set aside for future payment may never be paid simply because the right to the benefit ceases before the due date (by death, or marriage, perhaps). In such case, the amount remaining in the fund will become payable in lump-sum.

Lump sums may be payable to the beneficiaries of people who die after retirement, too. The conditions of eligibility and payment will be similar to those just described. In any event, it can be expected that if all the annuities paid out on the basis of any one employe's service do not equal the amount to the employe's credit in the fund at his death, an unexpended balance will exist and it will be payable to his beneficiary or his estate.

Claims Must Be Filed

It should be remembered, however, in regard to all annuities, balances and benefits under both the old and the new laws, that no payments are awarded automatically; claims must be filed with the Civil Service Commission to start the ball rolling.

It is very important that every employe make out a designation of beneficiary form. They are available from agency personnel offices. Anyone may be named the beneficiary to get the money remaining in a deceased employe's or annuitant's retirement account—parent, wife, brother, daughter, a business acquaintance, a friend, or a religious, social or educational group. It should be realized that if no one is named beneficiary, any lump sum which may be payable will go to the administrator or executor of the estate or to the next of kin, in that order.

The Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act has simplified the refund and redeposit proposition, too. Here are a few of the key things we need to remember about this now:

If a person leaves, or is separated from, the Government with less than 20 years of civilian service to his credit, and before becoming eligible for House Civil Service Committee optional retirement, he can get a refund of the money to his credit in the fund. If he served more than one year, he will also get the interest on his deductions; if he served one year or less, no interest will be paid.

If a person has served 20 years or more in Federal civilian work, he is NOT entitled to a refund of his account money; he is entitled to an annuity at age 62.

If a separated person has over 5 years' but less than 20 years' civilian service to his credit, he has a choice of either taking a refund or leaving the money in the system for annuity purposes.

If a person leaves the service and takes his refund, and then returns to the Government, he is not required to repay the money he withdrew, but it is definitely to his advantage to do so.

If such a person wishes to repay his refunded money, there will be an interest charge.

HOUSE CHAMP — Representative William H. Stevenson (R., Wis.) led the drive in the House for the new Langer-Chavez-Stevenson bill. He authored the measure, which was approved in the House by an overwhelming vote. Stevenson is the ranking Republican member of the

No More Tontine Charge

The old tontine bugaboo is gone at last. That dollar-a-month assessment which used to be t aside from the employe's account exists no more. The tontine provisions will apply in the cases of persons separted before this law becomes effective, but after that date everything that goes into the employe's account stays there to his personal credit.

The Langer-Chavez-Stevenson Act says that the only geason for returning a retired employe over age 60 to Government work is because of the acute need of his special qualifications. If it is arranged to reemploy such a person, his annuity will continue to be paid to him, and an amount equal to the annuity he is getting will be deducted from his salary. No service credit will be given for the period of reemployment, and no retirement deductions will be made.

Annuitants under 60 years of age may be reemployed in the Government under the usual civil service conditions governing appointment and reinstatement.

So far as voluntary contributions to the Fund are concerned, the 1948 act simplified the method of computing just how much more annuity is being purchased when we put in our extra money. As an example of how this works out now, in the case of a person retiring at 60, every $100 he has credited to the voluntary contribution account (including the interest which his contributions earn) will increase his annuity by $8. The amount of additional annuity grows at the rate of 20 cents a year. The figure for the person retiring at 63, therefore, is $8.60. The following table shows the increases in 5-year stages.

8	60
9	65

Annuities used to accrue on a day-to-day basis; this has been changed to a monthly basis. The effect of this is that if an annuity stops before the end of any month (because of the death of the annuitant, for example), there will not be any accrued unpaid annuity due to the beneficiary for that part of the month which passed before the annuity terminated. Any unpaid annuity due (full months) upon the death of an annuitant goes to his beneficiary. Any unpaid annuity due upon the termination of an annuity to a survivor (because of remarriage, attainment of age 18, etc.), will go to the survivor, or to the survivor's estate if he has passed on.

The new act increased the annuity of those already on the retirement rolls by 25 per cent, or $300, whichever is less. The retired person has the choice, however, of taking the increase or of keeping his old rate and naming his wife to receive upon his death an annuity equal to one-half of what he is getting under the old law. The amount the wife gets, though, cannot exceed $600. A married female annuitant has the same right to name her husband as survivor annuitant.

The Following Table Illustrates Annuities Computed Under the Basic Formula When All Payments Have Been Made

Highest 5-yr. avg. salary	Years of creditable service 5	10	15	20	25	30	35
$1500	$200	$400	$600	$800	$1000	$1200	$1200
2000	225	450	675	900	1125	1350	1575
2500	250	500	750	1000	1250	1500	1750
3500	300	600	900	1200	1500	1800	2100
4000	325	650	975	1300	1625	1950	2275
5000	375	750	1125	1500	1875	2250	2625
7500	563	1125	1688	2250	2813	3375	3938
10,000	750	1500	2250	3000	3750	4500	5250

2 Babysitters Get Sitting in Court

They are accused of taking $1750 in loot from Mr. and Mrs. Pat Flor de Lise, 1850 Wyoming ave. nw., who had employed them.

Identified by police as Agnes Biggs, 21, and Lorenzo McCoy (Rockabye) Cradle, 20, both of 1815 Corcoran st. nw., the babysitters were left with the Flor de Lise's two small children February 16 when the parents went to a wrestling exhibition at Turner's Arena.

When the Flor de Lises returned, they found their home looted of fur coats, furniture, a radio and personal articles and, later, they found $250 worth of furniture missing from another house in which the Flor de Lises had belongings.

At the latter house, at 1659 Hobart st. nw., Police Detective Lewis E. Berry and Garner L. Norris found a list of 49 names and several addresses on a sheet of white wrapping paper, headed "Christmas Card List."

Checking the list, the detectives found one of the men listed had complained several years ago that Cradle had burglarized his home. Others on the list had received some of the stolen furniture.

Questioned, Miss Biggs and Cradle admitted the thefts, police said.

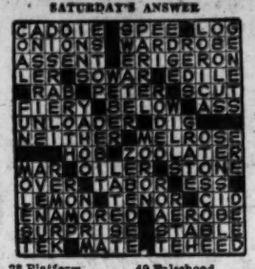
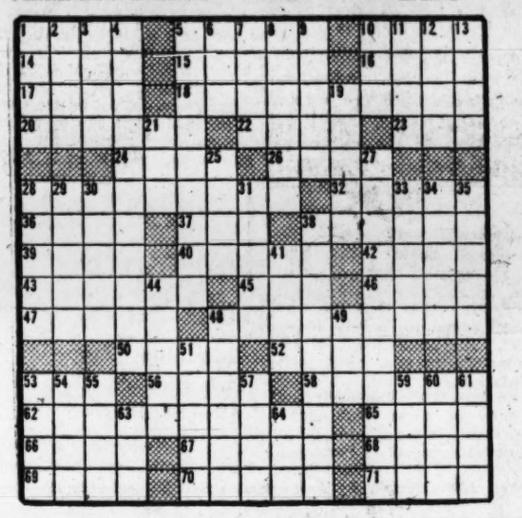
SATURDAY'S ANSWER





Shotgun Death At Dumfries Held Homicide

Manassas, Va., March 7 (Spl.).—Dr. E. H. Marsteller, Prince William County coroner, tonight issued a verdict of homicide in the shotgun death of a 44-year-old Dumfries, Va., woman.

The woman, Mrs. Emily Charles, was found shot in the back last night at her Dumfries home. Her brother-in-law, Eastland Keys, 59, of the same address, was found unconscious beside her with shotgun wounds in the arms. A sawed-off shot-gun was nearby on the floor.

Dr. Marsteller said today he had not talked to Keys, who was taken to the Marine Base Hospital at Quantico. Keys was reported too ill for questioning. There was no one else in the house at the time of the double shooting.

Commonwealth's Attorney Stanley A. Owens of Manassas said today that no charges have yet been made in the case. He said police had been unable to find a motive for the shooting.

Mrs. Charles, a widow, had been living at her brother-in-law's house for about a year. Keys is a retired farmer and one-time real estate dealer.

Hospital Switches To Margarine In Alexandria

A butter boycott is now in force at Alexandria's Hospital.

For some time now, the hospital has been looking with jaundiced eye at the rising price of butter. It has been using small portions and limited servings to cut down on butter overhead.

Now, according to the hospital publication PN, a more satisfactory solution has been reached. Both hospital patients and personnel now are being served margaine.

In Virginia, a Federal tax on colored margarine is charged, but otherwise, hospital officials say they are not prohibited from serving it as long as they advise those eating it that margarine is being used.

In announcing the butter departure, the hospital publication points out that the American Medical Association and the National Research Council say that fortified margarine can be substituted for butter at no nutritional disadvantage.

THE FAMILY SCRAPBOOK

Be Quick to Admit Your Mistake to a Child

By Dr. Ernest G. Osborne

In the "good old days" most parents and teachers felt that they should never admit to children that they had made mistakes. It was thought that children would lose respect for their elders if they did not think "the old folks" perfect.

Even the wisest of parents are sometimes wrong.

We often jump to conclusions as to what and why children have done, and then say or do things we regret. So, if you have decided that Johnny deliberately broke something and later find that it really wasn't his fault, try telling him you're sorry for having jumped to a wrong conclusion and veto any punishment you may have given him.

'The Girls' Hold Rally For Martha Taft at Mrs. Heiberg's New Home

By Marie McNair

SECRETARY OF WAR John H. Eaton wouldn't recognize the place if he could return to this wretched old earth and would stroll by 100 C st. se.

It was home to him and his beautiful wife, Peggy O'Neale—the "gorgeous hussy"—a century ago when Capitol Hill was the fashionable residential section of our town.

MRS. McNAIR

Mrs. Alf Heiberg is doing her best to restore that area with its wide tree-shaded streets, and its beautiful vistas, neath the shadow of the Capitol's dome. Under her magic fingers, 100 C st.—she's revived the name, Federal House—has been remodeled and redecorated and now it's her own charming home.

The white brick flat front house is banked with box and evergreens. Tall carriage lamps flank the brick steps and inside staairways have been moved, a terrace added to the second flor.

She's kept the wide floorboards in the kitchen, knocked out walls to add it to the dining room. The original slave quarters next door had been included in her plans but the price was upped sky high when a prospective purchaser came into view.

Louise has done it with mirrors. They're everywhere. Some are heavy gold framed colonial antiques, others are French and there's a beautiful portrait of her mother, the late Mrs. Edward T. Stotesbury, in one of the upstairs roms.

ON Saturday Louise invited "the girls" for a housewarming in honor of Mrs. Robert Taft, by coincidence, the very day that national headquarters to elect her former husband, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, President, were opened up here on Connecticut ave.

"A chicken in every pot" is the Republican slogan this year, said Democrat Bertha Joseph over a glass of French champagne" and for the Democrats, a Perle (Mesta) in every oyster." And looking her right in the eye when she said it was a Chinese blue ceramic elephant bearing a"Taft-for-President" placard, the centerpiece on the buffet.

Only serious note to the whole thing was when Martha Taft received a silver loving cup filled with champagne from the hands of her hostess. The presidential candidate's wife, who made her debut with Louise Heiberg in those golden days more than a quarter of a century ago, said: "No one knows the true meaning of the word friendship better than you."

LADY ROSS, widow of Sir Charles Henry Ross, is stopping off in Washington at the Shoreham after a number of healthy sun-filled weeks at her Florida home. On April 7 she'll sail on the Queen Mary to return to the Scotch moors and her rambling Balnagown Castle at Ross-shire. The second wife of the late Sir Charles is not as well known here as was her husband who lived on Massachusetts ave., over a period of years. The inventor of the Ross automatic rifle, Sir Charles lived through a succession of law suits, among them a seven-year battle in British, American and Mexico courts, fighting the divorce of his first wife, Patricia Ellison, a Kentucky belle. In Washington a moving concern took him to court for an alleged beating he gave one of the officials. And a man in the Middle West sued him for damages as the result of the famous Ross automatic backfiring in his face.

TOWN TOPICS: An invitation I shall accept is the preview opening of the Town and Country room at the Mayflower on Thursday afternoon. An invitation I should like to accept comes from the Greenbrier Hotel at White Sulphur Springs, for a long week end—Thursday, April 15, through Sunday, April 18. It's to see the new Greenbrier, super-duper hostelry, refurnished and refurbished, and opening for the first time since the war when it was turned into a hospital for convalescent servicemen.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Deeply in Love, Couple's Only Serious Rows Are Over Man's Mother; Currently They Are At Odds About Her Desire to Fondle New Baby

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 32, Joe is 31; and our home, which I love, is in his home town, within a few blocks of his numerous family, all of whom have been kind to me on many occasions, although they regard me as peculiar, to-wit: I am from New York, I am bookish, I fry eggs in butter, etc.

This is my second marriage and Joe and I are deeply in love. Our only major arguments have been over his mother, with whom I am now at odds about her desire to fondle and kiss our 2-months-old son who was born prematurely but has thrived on specialist care.

On leaving the hospital we spent some days with Joe's mother, where her elder sister—who really knows how to handle babies—took care of him and taught me how. People streamed in to look at him, but only Joe's mother saw fit to kiss him all over his tiny face. Being a guest, I was in no position to spare him all this.

The fireworks came when we were installed in our own home and once more she handled and kissed him. I said I didn't think he should be; and I said "Please!" She left in anger and ignored me for some weeks, crying to Joe that I had "stuck a knife" in her. He hadn't the guts to defend me, so finally I telephoned to apologize, saying I was sorry if I had been abrupt.

Mother Takes Strong Stand

SHE HAS been over since; but again we are at an impasse, as she comes in the evenings and I won't turn on the light in baby's room to have him looked at while asleep, and she says she won't come during the day to see him awake unless she can fondle and play with him. She says she couldn't stand keeping hands off; that she wouldn't feel like a grandmother doing so.

When I asked wouldn't she consider coming just to see me, she flatly said "No," that she could come only if she could play with the baby. I have practically begged her to have patience and wait until the baby is older and better able to be bounced around, and I have a pediatrician's backing in this.

However, she denounces pediatricians and my policies as "this 1948 nonsense." Meantime Joe supports her sentiments and belabors me for opposing her and putting him "in the middle." He doesn't say a word in defense of me to her.

Thus we are miserable when we should be happiest and I would welcome your objective comment, which I am prepared to respect even if you side with them in thinking me a cruel wretch. Incidentally, I had a child stillborn in my previous marriage, grief over which I almost let wreck me, but the passage of time and marriage to Joe brought me back to normal.

C. P.

Mother Makes Racket of Love

DEAR C. P.: Joe's mother is a "mom," who makes a racket of maternal sentiment and seems to be specially possessive of Joe, who significantly didn't marry until 29, and then chose a divorcee, a slightly older girl—evidence of the immature male unconsciously seeking a mother-wife.

Your major arguments over her stem from the fact that she isn't prepared to release him to adult life and growth; and that he is psychologically unweaned from a mother-fixation.

You are in a tough spot, dealing with two emotionally infantile adults and one bona fide infant whose welfare, like your own, is jeopardized by their carryings-on.

Whether she knows it or not, Joe's mother's rant about your baby—wanting to hold him, play with him, smear him with kisses, etc.,—is an act meant to conceal even from herself the fact that actually she jealously resents this new love-interest in Joe's life, which if left to flower naturally with you in the maternal role might bind Joe to you with hoops of steel.

Putting on Act To Delude Son

THUS for typical mixed "mom" reasons she is being a compulsive busybody about the baby, trying on the one hand to persuade Joe (watching her do her act) that she has the biggest, stanchest, tenderest mother-heart on earth, and trying on the other hand to put you in the light of being a hard-bitten female without a spark of sense, sympathy or warmth on the score of materna. feeling.

Her sole subjective aim is to keep Joe's soul lashed to her chariot wheel; and to that end, she would if she could steal his son's allegiance from you, beginning now with bribe of forbidden sweets in the way of "spoiling" attentions, —simply to devaluate you in Joe's estimation.

For advice: Don't let Joe's moral cowardice sobotage your courage. Don't surrender to the mother's bullying. Stand your ground with the pediatrician's backing. Get a copy of "Their Mothers' Sons," by Dr. Edward A. Strecker, study it with Joe, and soberly face the doctor's verdict:—when an unweaned male can't be a man in a case like this, the wife's only constructive defense is to give him back to his mama for keeps. White Wine Adds Flavor to Fish

Are you interested in increasing the goodness and decreasing the fishiness of fish? One way to do it is to bake it in white table wine, as follows:

To serve four, sprinkle four serving-size slices or fillets of halibut, salmon or other fresh or frozen fish, with salt and pepper and arrange in a greased shallow baking dish or pan. Sprinkle generously with chopped celery and onion, and dot each piece with butter or margarine. Over and around the fish pour about ¾ cup Sauterne or other white table wine. (It should cover the bottom of the dish about ¼-inch deep.) Bake in a moderate over (375 degrees) for 25 to 30 minutes, or until the fish flakes easily when tested with a fork. Serve with a little of the wine from the pan spooned over each piece; sprinkle with chopped parsley and accompany with big wedges of lemon.

Students Exhibit Crafts at School

By Lucia Brown

Students of Bethesda - Chevy Chase High School proved yesterday that if you can make a better clock case, crocheted hat, wall plaque or pickle fork than your neighbor, the world will indeed beat a path to your door to take a look at it.

The occasion was the opening of a Fine, Social and Practical Arts Exhibit, which attracted hundreds of visitors to the school on East-West hwy. to examine the excellent work done along these lines by its students. The exhibit will be open to the public each day through Wednesday from 9 a. m. to 3:30 p. m. and will close after a Parents - Teachers meeting Wednesday night.

The rosy glow of copper and warm sheen of polished wood and contrasted with the cool gleam of silver, moonstone and jade in the shop exhibits viewed yesterday. At one end of the room was a mouth-watering display of cakes and pies, some of them made by the same boys who had built the tip-top tables or hammered out the metal trays. The walls were a riot of color, exhibits of oil and water color paintings from the fine arts department being interspersed with collections of pretty spring clothes from the home arts classes.

The jewelry and gem cutting collection, from classes taught by A. J. Croddy, was one of the most unusual displays. A handsome bracelet made by George Yost has an Indian jade setting. Earrings of black obsidian were fashioned by Martha Ellis. Practical household articles in the collection were a sugar scoop and pickle fork with agate handles, made by Ralph Xander, and a candle snuffer fashioned by Bud Ulrey.

Beauiful brass, copper, wrought iron, nickel, silver and aluminum articles filled the tables devoted to the art metal display. Included were a number of articles made by Dade Boziewich, who was the only girl in her metal working class last year, but persuaded several girl friends to join her in studying this fascinating subject this year. A chased aluminum tray, brass box with raised floral design, and copper waste basket were among Dade's handiwork in the display. She has made many metal articles as gifts for friends and is taking jewelry making as well as the the metal arts class now.

Other interesting articles noted included a pair of copper wall lamps made by Jerry Twigg, Henry Kamp's copper and wood basket, and Bill Nesbitt's wrought iron shelves. The metal arts classes are taught by Albert W. Bender.

By Arthur Ellis—The Washington Post

FINE AND PRACTICAL ARTS: Dorothy Draim (left) designed and made the pink velvet and tulle evening dress she and Virginia Patterson are examining, and also painted the water color of French herring boats behind her

Plaster of Paris plaques, ceramic work, and clay modeling were included in the fine arts display from the classes of Miss Bernadette Sheehan. There were also many charcoal, crayon, and pencil sketches, pen-and-ink drawings, and paintings in oil, water color and tempera. A dozen of the paintings were by Dorothy Draim, whose water color "Back Yard" won first prize for Maryland at the National High School Exhibit at the Carnegie Fine Arts Institute in Pittsburgh last year.

Reproductions of old-fashioned Terry clocks were a feature of the exhibit of the woodwork classes, taught by Robert C. Henley. The clock cases, including the clock face and decorations, were made by members of the class. Clock works were bought second-hand, repaired and installed in the clocks. Though these clocks were usually made of mahogany early in the nineteenth century, Mr. Henley said, most of his class have made them of pine to go with modern furniture. Other woodwork included tables with inlaid decorations, plaque, a dove tailed chest, and a carving of a "Forty-niner" made by Robert McQuinn, member of the class of '49.

AND TELL OF TIME: Roddy Ware explains to Virginia Andrews how this reproduction of a Terry clock case was made in his woodwork class and how the works from an old clock were installed therein.

Selfishness Is Natural Trait; Children Learn by Giving

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Parents should be prepared for a child's selfishness, for unselfishness is learned and not natural behavior. It is natural for a child to want its own way; to hang onto its own things, until he learns that by giving up, by sharing, he garners other satisfactions as strong as those of possession alone.

Parents should remember that they are selfish, too. Not always in sharing what they possess with the child, but in giving up their own way. They may say that everything they ask the child to do is its best interest; but they have to admit that a good share of the time the child's obedience to their desires is both convenient and satisfying to them. Yet when a child obeys the parent, he is giving up his way for the parent's way. It's well to give him an opportunity to have his way some of the time, so that he understands the parents' unselfishness.

When children press their toys on others or cannot do enough for the visiting child, we should understand that there may be strong motivations for such conduct. The child's possessions mean less to him than to share companionship We want him to have that, but we should help him to find friends who will like him for himself as well as for what he can give them. We needn't deprive the child of the giving but we should understand what lies behind this manifestly, unnatural conduct.

Such a child may suffer disillusionment when he discovers that all children are not the same toward him. He must be shown that sharing and giving are ways of acting into which a child must grow. Some take longer than others to learn this behavior.

So long as a child can hang onto what belongs to him and be assured that no one will take it from him, he has a chance to develop a sure sense of property rights. What he owns is his. He can't learn this or any respect for the property of others, unless he is protected in his selfishness. Also, to shame and ridicule him for his natural emotions is to shake his faith in himself as a person. He knows he wants what belongs to him and yet his parents make him feel that such conduct is evil and unlikable.

Let's understand, then, that children will be selfish until such time as they understand the "mine and thine" principle and then through growth and understanding, and a fine example of parental unselfishness, they arrive at a willingness to exchange, to share and to give.

Frozen Meats Are Subjected To Flavor Test

Whether or no. to thaw frozen meat before cooking is a question of importance to the many housewives today who are using meat from home freezers and freezer lockers and are interested in the best methods of cooking it.

An answer to this and other cooking questions comes from Isabel Nobel of the Minnesota Experiment Station who recently carried on a series of cooking tests with frozen meat.

Equally satisfactory results may be obtained by thawing meat before cooking and by putting the meat on to cook while still frozen, Miss Noble reports, if cooking time and temperature are adjusted accordingly. Unthawed meat needs considerably longer time to cook and always a moderately low temperature so that the meat can thaw in the first part of the cooking and cook to the desired doneness during the last part.

Flavor Is Same

Slow-thawed and fast-thawed meat give equally good results in cooking, Miss Noble reports. She found no difference in flavor, juiciness and shrinkage between the meats thawed slowly in the refrigerator and thawed rapidly out on the kitchen table. No exact time for thawing can be given because the thawing time depends on size, shape, thickness and other characteristics of the meat. But roughly, a 4-pound roast takes from 1½ to 2 days to thaw in the refrigerator and 8 to 10 hours to thaw at room temperature, and an inch-thick steak takes overnight in the refrigerator but only about 4 hours at room temperature.

If meat is put on to cook while still frozen, it takes much longer to cook, and the temperature should be moderately low, Miss Noble reports. A beef roast put into the oven frozen takes from 2½ to 3 times longer to cook "rare", and as much as 4½ times longer to cook "well done" than a thawed or fresh roast. A frozen inch-thick steak takes 3 times as long to cook "rare" and 4½ times as long to cook "well done" as a thawed or fresh steak. A good deal of heat is required to melt the ice crystals before actual cooking of the entire piece can get underway.

It's wonderful! It's different! It's everything you ever hoped a panty-girdle could be . . . does everything you ever hoped a panty-girdle could do. For comfort, it's a wish come true. No pulling, pinching, cutting, straining; no riding up—because SPORT-TIGHTS are cut to the actual contours of the body. SPORT-TIGHTS have longer legs than the average panty-girdle. This insures snug, smooth fit, and prevents chafing.

For figure beauty it's a smoothie—does the slickest job of curve-controlling, but with a velvet touch! For budgets, it's a blessing—little-priced and so long wearing. For sportswear action-freedom, a must . . . for dancing, a dream. For daytime, night-time, every season, anytime. And soon as you've tried SPORT-TIGHTS, you'll start singing its praises, too!

WHAT IS THE SECRET OF SPORT TIGHTS' "FIT-FROM-EVERY-ANGLE"?

Cross Section of Ordinary Pantie Girdle. Unlike the body's curve, the shape of the average panty girdle causes binding, cutting and acute discomfort.

Cross Section of the Human Body. This is the way that nature has shaped the human body. Note its curve, and depth at the crotch.

Cross Section of SPORT-TIGHTS. Sport-Tights' contour crotch is shaped as the body is shaped. Note the inches of extra depth, the extra curve of the back, assuring action-freedom.

Are you reading "Mary Haworth's Mail"? It's Washington's favorite column on personal problems.

Ask Anne — Your Questions on Homemaking

The partition between my kitchen and dining room has been removed except for a counter. The kitchen walls are smooth plaster with a white enamel finish. The dining room is "sand" finished plaster covered with white wallpaper. I would like to know how I can put a semigloss, oil base paint over both rooms? The wallpaper has only been on one year and is in perfect condition. Could a primer be applied over the paper and then the oil base paint applied? If so, what sort of primer? The paper would be very difficult to remove, and too, we were told by the builder of the house that paint could not be applied directly over the plaster of the dining room because it was not a smooth finish. I know water paints could be applied, but I don't want this.
M. C. H.

Since there is only one layer of wallpaper and it is in very good condition, you can apply the paint over it without removing. It is not necessary to use a primer on either kitchen or dining room wall. Use a good quality flat wall paint of the same color as the finish coat is to be, for the first coat. Thin this with a pint of raw linseed oil to a gallon of paint. Allow to dry very thoroughly and put on the finish coat.

I have a desk with dark finish (wood not known) on which are some stains, thought to be ink. They must be more than four years old. Is there any way of removing them short of refinishing) that will not spoil the finish? P. T.

No, it is not possible to remove old stains which have penetrated wood without refinishing. Such stains have to be sanded out of the wood or bleached, and to do this the finish must be taken off.

I have a large oval, antique, plaster of Paris picture frame which I want to refinish and use as a mirror frame. Will you please tell me how to strip the remaining old plaster of Paris from the wooden base? I am told there is a composition or plastic coating which is more satisfactory than plaster of Paris, and which may be applied to the wooden base of the frame to give a smooth foundation for a gilt or gold leaf finish. Will you tell me what this is, and where it may be obtained? Can you suggest a really good grade of gilt, with antique finish, and where I may buy it? Can you suggest someone in Washington or Alexandria whom I could get to apply gold leaf to the frame? In case this whole refinishing job proves to be too much for me, will you please suggest a professional refinisher of antique frames whom I could get to do a good piece of work on this frame? J. B. R.

Chip the plaster of Paris to remove the largest part of it. The rest of it can be removed to the base by placing cloths dampened in water onto it, allowing to stand until plaster is soaked, then wiping off. I have not been able to find anyone who sells the sort of plastic coating to which you refer. In its stead, you can mix glue or lacquer with plaster to form a paste and apply it to the frame. When it is thoroughly dry, sand it until very smooth.

Applying gold leaf is a very time-consuming job requiring special tools for burnishing and other work. Because of this, if you wish to use gold leaf I would suggest that you turn the job over to a professional antique restorer. Look under "Antiques" in the yellow pages of the telephone directory for dealers who also do repairing. There is on the market a gold powder which can be mixed with bronzing liquid, varnish or lacquer and painted onto the frame giving it a gilded finish. This is a simpler operation than applyng gold leaf. We do not recommend specific products in this column, but for further information about gold powder call NAtional 6386. For someone to undertake the entire job of refinishing, look under "Picture Frames" in the telephone book.

I do hand-painting on aprons, bedspreads, crib spreads, pillow cases, dresser scarfs etc., and would like to know where I might be able to sell them. R. T.

Look in the yellow pages of your telephone book for the names and addresses of gift and infant shops in your area or the Washington area. Select a few, and telephone them asking to speak to the buyer and ask him if he buys such merchandise. When you find a buyer who is interested in your hand-painted articles, make an appointment with him or her to show samples of your work. Some such shops sell for you on commission and others buy the merchandise outright. Also, some might display your work and take orders for you. The small, individually owned shops which sell handmade work would be the best ones to contact.

My baby's formula calls for 32 ozs. of homogenized milk brought to a simmer for one minute. How can I prepare the milk without having the bottom scorch and without stirring the entire time? (Even with stirring a little always seems to scorch.) A. A.

Simmering temperature is from 180 degrees to 200 degrees F. under the 212 degrees F. of boiling. This temperature can easily be obtained by placing the milk in the top of a double boiler and heating until the milk bubbles. Or, place an asbestos pad (obtainable at dime and hardware stores) under the pan.

I have pigskin gloves that are quite dirty. I would like to know how to clean them properly. Someone has suggested soap and water. R. S.

If the gloves were sold as washable, you can clean them with soap and water. Place the gloves on your hands, working a little extra mild soap or castile soap into the soiled spots at the ends of the fingers and cuffs. Now, wet in luke warm water and rub your hands together, working the soiled spots. When clean, remove from hands, turning inside out as you do so. Wash inside of gloves. Rinse thoroughly and turn right side out. Shape and puff out fingers by blowing into them. Pat with paper towel to absorb as much moisture as possible. Stuff fingers and hand lightly with paper tissues and place where they will dry quickly, but away from heat. When almost dry, work gently with the fingers to soften.

I have an unpainted pine corner cabinet that I would like to finish to a dark brown Mahogany. I can't buy any mahogany stain except the red, and I can't use it. Is it possible to mix any stains to get a dark brown mahogany finish? Please tell me how to stain it satisfactorily. E. M.

It is possible to mix stains and perhaps by mixing mahogany varnish stain you would get the brown mahogany finish. It will take some experimenting to get just the shade you wish. Soft wood such as pine may absorb the stain more readily in some spots than in others. To prevent this and obtain an even tone, give the surface a coat of half-and-half mixture of raw linseed oil and turpentine before staining. When this has thoroughly dried, apply two coats of mixed varnish stain.

U-m-m! No other toothpaste tastes as good as Lyons! If you've ever tasted soap, you have a pretty good idea why old-style toothpastes . . . toothpastes made with soap . . . taste the way they do. But one toothpaste that's different . . . that's made without soap . . . is new Lyons Toothpaste. As a result, it tastes better, has the pleasantest, cleanest, most refreshing flavor ever—a wonderful new taste in toothpaste!

A-h-h! No other toothpaste gets teeth as bright as Lyons! Why? Because there's no other toothpaste—anywhere—that's like Lyons. Using a completely new, radically different formula—a modern formula that's really revolutionary—it does what no other toothpaste can do . . . actually gets teeth brighter—2½ to 5½ times brighter than any toothpaste you've ever heard about, bought or used! For evidence, see the chart below.

Based on thousands of laboratory tests on scores of individual teeth, these bars show how much brighter Lyons Toothpaste gets teeth than any other toothpaste!

No other toothpaste gives you these two great benefits! Next time you buy toothpaste, remember that Lyons Toothpaste—and only Lyons—gives you the advantages of its patented cleansing agent and its superior polishing agent. As a result, it not only cleans beautifully, but brightens brilliantly . . . gets teeth 2½ to 5½ times brighter than any toothpaste on the market. And this is mighty important to you. Because the brighter your teeth look, the better you look. Today—get new Lyons Toothpaste!

The amazing new toothpaste that cleans without soap...polishes without chalk!

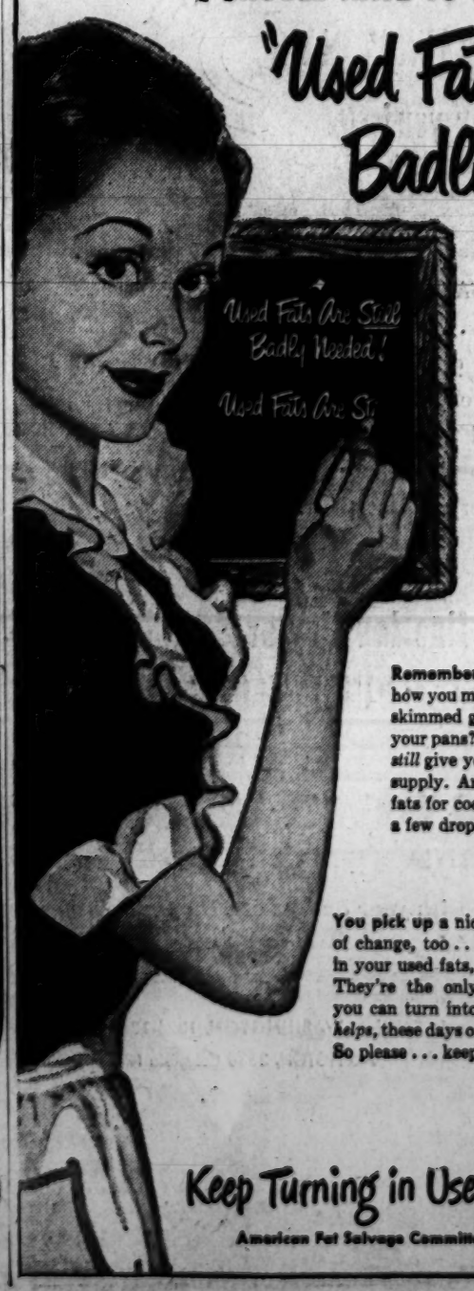
I SHOULD HAVE TO WRITE IT 100 TIMES:
"Used Fats Are Still Badly Needed!"



It is hard to realize, but it's all too true! We're still fighting the worst shortage of fats and oils the world has ever known. Our government says there simply isn't enough to go around. One way we can help keep this supply from getting even lower is to turn in our used fats.

Remember during the war, how you melted down fat trimmings, skimmed gravies . . . really scraped your pans? Those tricks still work . . . still give you a worthwhile extra supply. And even if you re-use your fats for cooking, there are always a few drops left to save.
You pick up a nice little piece of change, too . . . when you turn in your used fats, remember. They're the only kitchen waste you can turn into cash . . . and it helps, these days of high food costs. So please . . . keep saving . . .

Chinese Reds Drop Siege of Key City

For Nationalization

British Labor Party Maps 1950 Fight

London, March 7 (AP).—The Labor Party indicated today it will seek reelection in 1950 on a platform calling for a sharp increase in government ownership of British industry.

Party pamphlet entitled "Public Ownership—Next" did not list specific industries for nationalization but suggested they should fall into one or more of four categories:

1. Basic suppliers of vital raw materials, or other industries important to human life, health or defense.
2. Activities monopolized by one or more large trusts.
3. Business investing capital on a large scale.
4. Enterprises suffering from very bad industrial relations.

The pamphlet said the time to choose specific industries would come shortly before the general election, and added:

"By then, we shall know how fully . . . various private industries are willing to cooperate with the government in raising productivity and advancing the general welfare."

Industries nationalized since labor won power in 1945, or slated to be taken over before 1950, include coal, steel, electricity, gas and all kinds of transportatoin.

Begin Withdrawal From Szepingkai As Attacks Fail

Peiping, March 7 (AP). — Pro-government Chinese dispatches reported with surprise and jubilation today the Communists had abandoned their seige of Szepingkai, a key Manchurian railway point.

The correspondents said the Communists began their withdrawal Saturday after failing in a new drive on the outskirts of the city 105 rail miles northeast of Mukden.

The Nationalist command in Mukden, recovering from its initial mystification, represented the development as possibly presaging a comeback for the government forces.

(Associated Press Correspondent Harold K. Milks in Nanking said military observers there felt the beginning of spring thaws might be a factor in Communist retirements because mud robs them of their greatest asset—mobility.)

Communist units were reported virtually surrounding Yenan, one-time Communist headquarters in Shensi Province.

Gearhart to Speak

The Washington Police and Fire Department Post of the American Legion will hold its annual birthday meeting tomorrow at 8 p. m. in Odd Follews' Hall, 419 7th st. nw. Representative Bertram W. Gearhart (R., Calif.), one of the founders of the legion, will speak.

Decorator to Speak

Mrs. Charles Stewart Payne, interior decorator, will speak at a luncheon meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Arlington County Medical Society at 12:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Washington Golf and Country Club.

HE WON'T COMPETE: Dick Contino, with Horace Heidt, is the accordionist who's been copping those $250 prizes regularly each broadcast, will be along with Heidt when the bandman arrives Thursday for his week on the Capitol stage. He'll play with the band, but won't be permitted to join the money chase, which seems fair enough

Truman Not Issue, Wallace Says, Denying He'd Return

Truman is not the issue, Wallace told 2000 delegates attending Pennsylvania's first Progressive Party convention.

"The doctrine which carries his name is an issue," Wallace said, "and it was in the plans of the men who are running the Government long before they told Harry Truman about it.

"The Truman Doctrine calls for military advice and economic aid to countries fighting communism. Greece and Turkey are two nations already receiving United States assistance.

"Those men and their plans won't be changed by the simple substituation of another servant of the same interest," he insisted.

The convention chose the name "Progressive Party"—first formal name given to the new political group—and adopted an eight-point platform. It subscribed to practically all the views already expressed by Wallace on foreign affairs and anti-inflation policies at home. One of the planks called for abolition by Congress of the House Committee on Un-American Activities.

De Gasperi Carries Drive to North Italy

Rome, March 7 (AP). — Premier Alcide de Gasperi today carried his campaign for the April 18 elections into the leftist north section of Italy.

At Turin, he charged that Italian Communists "recognize Stalin and Lenin as their chiefs." Turin has a Communist mayor and is regarded by the Communist Party as one of its strongest districts.

One on the Aisle—

Teen-Age Tutor Or Soxers' Joy?

By Richard L. Coe

PEOPLE ABOUT THE TOWN: For a young fellow who still wants to teach school, Keith Andes is doing fine on the stage. . . . The tall, blond husky is swell as the National's "Chocolate Soldier" and you saw him on the screen as one of Loretta Young's brothers in "The Farmer's Daughter" . . . He's got that sock stage quality people either have or haven't and despite those beliefs of his picturesque name (Andes as in mountains) eventually will mean more than it does no wto theatergoers . . . Robust leading men don't grow on trees . . . Upper Darby, Pa., is home to Keith . . . Before the war he took a year at Oxford's New College, then graduated from Temple, majoring in education . . . The Army Air Force surprised him when a talent scout for "Winged Victory" turned him into an actor . . . Opening night in New York the miracle happened; Barry Nelson was ill and Keith got the lead . . . This led to aSelznick contract and post-war basking in the California clime. . . . "Very pleasant," muses Keith, "but I don't like waiting around for parts the way everyone has to do out there, though the pay's better than teaching." . . . Offstage he talks of education, sociology, music, the state of the world (very bad) and athletics . . . He keeps his phenomenally trim 190 pounds in shape by weight-lifting classes for the Oscar Straus company . . . But the great even in Keith's life took place just at the second act finale two weeks ago . . . The backstage phone rang from Philadelphia . . . To tell him there's a new person in the world named Mark Christopher Andes . . . Wonder how that former Army nurse who used to be a model prefers her husband . . . the bobby-sovers' delight or the teen-agers' tutor?

HOWARD LINDSAY, in and out of town like a breeze, talks of "Life With Mother" . . . The successor to the fabulous "Father" is virtually ready and Wife-Costar-Mother Dorothy Stickney's trip to Hollywood for a movie with Monty Woolley has little to do with the play's postponement till June . . . The real gen on this seems to be that co-author Russel Crouse and his wife are expecting a baby in May and, lud, you can't have a new baby AND a new play at the same time . . . So "Life with Mother" will wait for the second Crouse infant's arrival and meantime Dorothy will make one of her infrequent film appearances . . . The Lindsay-Crouse colaboration began with "Anything Goes" in 1933 and they've been the closest of pals ever since.

MARY ELIZABETH STABLER has moved her out-of-town theater ticket "Mart" from the Lafayette to Lanseair, the travel service at 1616 K . . . Miss Stabler makes those reservations for theaters, concerts, operas and sporting events for folks who haven't got the mail order habit . . . You reach her at NAtional 6750.

CHARLES LATSHAW, the Georgetown scarf designer, came to the aid of Spike Jones Saturday night . . . The ebullient Spike had just gotten in some of his snappy, hand-tailored suits from California and among them was a new finale dish—a white job with gold checks! . . . "But what am I going to use for a necktie with a white and gold suit?" moaned Spike, who was entertaining President Truman at the White House Correspondent's dinner . . . And, also, trying to keep from saying WHO his guest artist was to be later in the evening (Margaret's father didn't even know!) . . . To Spike's cravetless problem came Latshaw and his clever handmaiden, Mary Proctor . . . Who whipped up a plastic gold bow after pondering suggestions from Georgetowners who'd learned of the City Slicker's bizarre plight.

JULIE CURTIS, daughter of Mrs. Marge Curtis, 4635 49th st. nw., is the latest Washington gal to crash the New York footlight parade . . . Julie has a minor singing role in "Look Ma, I'm Dancin'!" . . . You may have heard Julie, a Woodrow Wilson graduate, when she sang "Katinka" at Constitution Hall with the Columbia Light Opera Company . . . Good for Julie.

JOSEPH HARRIS, known as the "Innkeeper" to those who've been going to those Gadsby Tavern colonial revivals, gets a stage role in the Alexandria Little Theater's coming production of "S. S. Tenacity" . . . This is the French play by Charles Vildrac which the group will be doing for four evenings starting next Monday night at the George Washington High School . . . Others in the cast include George Herndon, Robert Marmet, Jane Vida, Doris Stuart, Ruchard Barton, Benjamin McElhinney, jr., Kenneth Downes, Richard Wade and Bruce Stuart, jr.

WHO ARE those people lined up in front of the National this morning? . . . They're ticket chasing for the Spike Jones "Musical Depreciation Revue," which opens Sunday night.

HOME OWNERS:
YOU CAN'T CHANGE TO GAS HEAT!
IF THE LIMITATION ORDER PROPOSED by the Washington Gas Light Company is approved by the Public Utilities Commission at its public hearing to be held March 15, 1948, ONLY 14,000 GAS-FIRED HOME HEATING UNITS MAY BE ADDED DUE TO AN ANTICIPATED SHORTAGE OF GAS! AND THAT FOR NEW HOMES ONLY!
WE BELIEVE that home owners who plan to heat their already-built homes with gas are more entitled to gas for heating than those planning to buy new homes!

Floorwalker Finds "Paradise" Pounding a Beat

Mrs. F. N. Countiss of 1731 New Hampshire ave. nw. wonders whether we've ever heard about the floorwalker who wanted to be a policeman.

While the fellow was waiting for his appointment to the force, he earned a living as a floorwalker. He trained his staff to be as courteous as possible, and soothed complaining customers in his most professional floorwalking manner.

Then he finally got on the force, and a friend found him walking his beat one day and stopped to pass the time of day.

"Ah," sighed the cop, "it's wonderful. In this business the customer isn't always right."

WEEP NO MORE MY LADY

Seven-year-old Sally Currier of 3225 Volta pl. nw. was the successful applicant for one of our recent Give-Away puppies.

As Sally and her folks were bringing the prize home, the grownups remarked about the

"It's too bad he had to take it so hard. He must have cried for five minutes," said Mama.

"I know how he must have felt," replied Sally soberly. "If I had to give up my dog I'll bet I'd cry for 10 minutes."

PERSONAL NOTES

LOOKING FOR HOUSING?

Frederick Terman tells me that veterans who are looking for a place to live should attend Tuesday's meeting of the Evans F. Carlson Chapter of the A. V. C. (8 p. m., Petworth Library, Upshur st. and Georgia ave., nw.).

The speaker will be Bob Carter, the group's National Director of Veterans Affairs, "a real hep guy on the matter of housing."

Carter will give a report on the Veterans National Housing Conference which was held last Sunday and Monday.

When District Liner Terman learned that among the 1200 veterans who attended that meeting there was even a representative of the Alaska chapter, he quipped:

"Gee, there must be an igloo shortage, too."

ANNOUNCEMENT

When the boss broke the news to me I asked him what kind of program he wanted me to do.

"You mean a dignified news commentary—like Kaltenborn except more pontifical?" I inquired.

The boss laughed. So long as I can keep him laughing, I'm safe.

"No," he said, "the only instructions I'm going to give you are be yourself, tell it your own way, and talk about anything you think is interesting."

This might turn out to be a lot of fun. We'll soon see. The program starts at noon today, and will be broadcast Monday through Saturday at that time over WINX (1340) and WINX-FM (96.3).

ADD SIGNS

Do You Love Me

Leonard Lyons . . .

HOLLYWOOD—Many of the French, German and Viennese theater people who now work in Hollywood speak reverently of the stage productions in their native countries and insist that their equal cannot be found on the English-speaking stage . . . Dorothy Parker once heard Ernst Lubitsch scoff at Gielgud's Hamlet and state that the greatest Hamlet he ever saw was a German in Reinhardt's company. "But how could Hamlet be better in German than in English?" Mrs. Parker asked . . . "It's better. Much better, in German," said Lubitsch . . . "You must admit, though," said Mrs. Parker, "that Shakespeare made a pretty good translation."

Mike Romanoff, the restaurateur, expresses annoyance at those who tell him that they saw his picture among the photos of the guests at the Rockefeller-Sears wedding, and that he must have felt proud to be there . . . "My presence at the wedding was not by way of compliment to me," says Romanoff. "It was a compliment to the bride and groom. And mind you, they deserved it" . . . Romanoff, incidentally, together with the other restaurateurs here, is getting heavy competition from Billy Wilkerson's new cafe, L'Aiglon. "As far as Romanoff is concerned," said Chester Erskine, "L'Aiglon is the worst thing since Karl Marx."

Nancy Mae Woodbury, the model, arrived here the other day. She was one of the passengers, including Winthrop Rockefeller, in the plane which was saved by the expert piloting of Dick Merrill in the Florida crash . . . "I don't believe all that stuff about your life passing before you in those last few minutes," said Miss Woodbury. "I thought of only two things. First, that the Mae Wests, which they made us put on, where designed for men and not for women. It's impossible to fasten the bottom part and keep your skirt down. Secondly, I thought 'I musn't forget to take my gold cigarette case and lighter.'"

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

Leak Hurt Truman With Unionists

By Drew Pearson

One of the most significant White House conversations in recent years was between Chester Bowles, then head of OPA, and President Truman in the early winter of 1945-46 when there was still time to save price control.

Bowles

Bowles, who saw clearly what would happen if price controls were taken off, told the President with great satisfaction that he had worked out a deal with the AFL and CIO not to ask for wage increases if price controls were continued.

He explained that if price controls were abandoned, organized labor was all set to ask for a series of big wage boosts, which in turn would lead to more price increases, more inflation, and another round of wage increases.

However, organized labor had agreed to a moratorium on wage increases if price controls were kept. Naturally Bowles expected Truman to be pleased. He wasn't. Instead, he launched into a tirade against labor leaders.

"Those—labor leaders," he said. "You can't trust 'em. They're wrecking the country. There's only one you can trust and that's John L. Lewis. Aside from him I wouldn't trust any of those—labor leaders."

Naturally this conversation leaked back to Phil Murray of the CIO and William Green of the AFL. It didn't endear Truman to them. But, more important, it upset an agreement by which the present disastrous inflation could have been prevented—all because Truman lost his temper. Incidentally, it was only a few months later that Truman was cussing out John L. Lewis for tying up the entire Nation with a coal strike.

In brief, more and more people have got wise to the manner in which the President tangents. He can send messages to Congress which read beautifully on paper, but, when it comes to carrying out those messages, it's all too apparent that Truman doesn't believe in them.

GOP Anti-Lynch Debate

Republicans have been planning to take in Negro votes with their anti-lynching bill, but it looks as if they would have trouble with their own members, and three stanch Republicans — Representatives John Gwynne of Iowa, Frank Fellows of Maine and Edward Devitt of Minnesota—upset the GOP applecart at a closed-door session of the Judiciary Committee.

Speaker Joe Martin and other GOP leaders had decided at a previous secret caucus to make the anti-lynch law applicable to crimes against property as well as persons. Also, they decided to approve Section 1 of the bill, a declaration of racial equality which Democratic foes claimed was a "political stump talk, aimed at further dividing the Democratic Party."

However, when the Judiciary Committee met behind closed doors, Gwynne and Fellows joined the Democrats in a close vote to delete Section 1.

"Let's confine this to an anti-lynching bill and leave out the political stump talk aimed at Southern States, which has no place in legislation," demanded Democrat Francis Walter of Pennsylvania.

GOP Representative Clifford Case of New Jersey, the bill's author, contended that Section 1 was written on the advice of "experts," who felt that a preamble was necessary.

Republican Devitt of Minnesota offered the motion to kill the "crimes against property" provision. This would have made it a violation of the anti-lynch law for two or more persons to conspire to injury the property of another. The motion carried over hot opposition from Republicans Case and John Jennings of Tennessee, who insisted that if it was wrong to lynch a man, it also was wrong to "wreck his store or his home."

"I submit again that this is irrelevant to the problem of preventing lynchings," broke in Walter of Pennsylvania. "This is either an anti-lynching bill or it isn't. Let's hew to the line."

The Republicans also had to accept defeat on a provision that Federal grants-in-aid be withheld from any State if a town or community therein refused to pay a judgment to heirs of a lynch victim.

This was stricken out on a motion by Democrat Walter, again supported by GOP Congressmen Gwynne and Fellows.

"A State would be penalized for lynching committed within its borders by out-of-State thugs under this provision," objected Democrat Fadjo Cravens of Arkansas.

Merry-Go-Round

Texas State College students, taking a poll of a typical Texas town, Denton, found that only 27.3 per cent wanted to keep the poll tax. Forty-six per cent said they wanted to get rid of the poll tax, 25.7 per cent had no opinion . . . The Argentine government is trying to get the State Department's OK for a tour of the USA by Eva Peron, famous wife of Argentina's Dictator President.

Court of law

The court of law is where we go . . . To sue or get divorced . . . To answer charges or to have . . . A certain rule enforced . . . It is a room where justice is . . . Supposed to hold the scales . . . Though now and then a plot succeeds . . . And perjury prevails . . . Where sometimes lawyers argue while . . . The judge and jury yawn . . . Or witnesses get out of hand . . . And children carry on . . . But usually the court of law . . . Is what it ought to be . . . In keeping with our principles . . . Of true equality . . . Where all related facts are weighed . . . With wisdom and with care . . . And everybody tries to reach . . . A verdict that is fair.

TWO STORES OF NATIONALLY FAMOUS MERCHANDISE

Irene F. Long . . . of Cheyenne, Wyoming . . . came to Washington to serve as Secretary to the late Senator Robert D. Carey. During World War II she was Confidential Assistant to the late Vice Admiral Howard L. Vickery, U. S. Maritime Commissioner in Charge of Merchant Shipbuilding . . . is now an Administrative Assistant with the Maritime Commission.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

WYOMING . . . the equality state

The members of the State Society of Wyoming appreciate the opportunity afforded us by The Hecht Company to tell of the glories of our home State. We are proud of our nickname . . . the Equality State . . . given us as the first State to grant women equal voting rights with men. We take pride in our fine institutions of learning . . . in our thriving agricultural and mining industries . . . in our grand and unique natural wonders. The amazing and awe-inspiring geysers of Yellowstone National Park . . . the grandeur of the Teton Range . . . the rolling plains of rich grasslands . . . are all included in the spreading panorama of our State. The pioneering spirit which led our fathers and grandfathers to make their homes in Wyoming . . . then a wilderness area held by native Indian tribes . . . is still alive today. Although Wyoming is already one of the Nation's greatest livestock and mining States . . . our people are going ahead to develop her even greater potentialities . . . The Missouri River Basin project is now underway . . . to furnish power to spark new industries . . . to increase our irrigated acreage and expand our agricultural production. Wyoming is indeed a wonderful State. It is a tourist land extraordinary . . . with attractions for both the hunter and the photographer. We invite you all to visit this inspiring vacation land . . . in a State which is every day growing and expanding . . . developing her many natural resources and facilities . . . in the true American tradition.

Irene F. Long

President, Wyoming State Society

WYOMING . . . Magnet for tourists. . . Attracted by the Yellowstone National Park . . . Wyoming's infinite scenic wonders . . . and her famous rodeos and dude ranches. Wyoming is called the Equality State . . . since it was the first State in the Union to give women equal rights to vote and hold office . . . back in 1869. In 1925, Wyoming inaugurated the first woman Governor . . . Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross . . . now Director of the United States Mint.

WYOMING . . . Great mineral producing State . . . today produces coal, petroleum, iron, bentonite, trona and jade. Wyoming has some of the world's largest deposits of sub-bituminous coal . . . as well as much other undeveloped mineral wealth. Her geological formations have attracted students of geology from all parts of the country and the world. One of the world's largest oil refining centers is at Casper.

WYOMING . . . A great livestock State. Her agricultural wealth lies in the millions of cattle and sheep . . . which graze on her far-flung ranches and plains. Her farms also produce corn, wheat, oats, fruit, seed potatoes . . . and sugar beets, prized for their high sugar content. The Missouri River Basin reclamation project . . . one of the largest reclamation projects in the Nation's history . . . will further increase Wyoming's farm acreage.

WYOMING . . . Whose "trademark" is the cowboy on a bucking bronco . . . standard on Wyoming license plates. Her annual "Frontier Days" pageant and rodeo at Cheyenne is the "Daddy of 'Em All." The celebration has become a national institution. The town of Cody, named for the famous "Buffalo Bill" . . . maintains the Cody Museum which displays mementoes of Cody's unparalleled wild west performance.

WYOMING . . . Where Jackson's Hole, the Indians' "Happy Hunting Ground," is still a happy hunting ground for the big game hunter and fisherman. Above Jackson's Hole rises the Teton Range . . . whose Trois Tetons were a landmark to fur trappers and explorers. From Wyoming's massive upland . . . she is the second State in elevation in the country . . . rivers flow down in all directions. The Missouri, Columbia and Colorado Rivers all rise in the State.

WYOMING . . . In the early days was crossed by almost all the famous routes to the West . . . the Oregon, Overland, California, Mormon, Bozeman and Bridgers Trails . . . and the Pony Express. Famous Independence Rock, known to the early emigrants as "The Register of the Desert," was a favorite camp site along the Oregon Trail. Wyoming was settled following construction of the Union Pacific Railroad in the 1860s. The railroad was thrust across the wilderness against great odds . . . the work made hazardous by unfriendly Indians.

WYOMING . . . Where, at Thermopolis, in Hot Springs State Park, is located the world's largest mineral hot spring . . . visited by thousands to take advantage of the health-giving properties of the spring's water.

WYOMING . . . Site of Yellowstone National Park, the oldest and largest of the National Parks . . . one of the greatest U. S. tourist attractions. The Yellowstone is said to have more and greater geysers than all the rest of the world combined. The Park's greatest single attraction is Old Faithful . . . which erupts regularly and on schedule about once every hour. Other famous attractions in Yellowstone Park are the Grand Canyon, the Grand and Ghetto Geysers . . . Morning Glory Pool . . . Fire Hole River . . . Sulphur Mountain . . . and the Great Falls of the Yellowstone, higher than Niagara.
